LINK JUDGE IN INSURANCE FAILURE

STATE PROBE FAVORED BY DE CELLES

Declaring that he hopes an investigation of the bankrupt Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company will be made, Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles said today that it would involve a New York supreme court justice and a prominent New York Republican.

DeCelles was answering charges made yesterday before the joint rules committee of the Legislature, in which Grover C. Hoyt, former chairman and secretary of the board of appeal on insurance, said:

"If Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles did not know that the company planned to collect all premiums possible and pay out as little as possible in losses, and that its program included folding up in December, he was the only man in the insurance world of Boston who did not."

Hoyt charged also that the company was "started by a New York gang to fleece the people of Massachusetts," and had collected $900,000 in premiums in 1936, paying out only $274,000.

De CELLES' REPLY

The ousted chairman of the board of appeal on insurance appeared before the committee and urged favorable action on an order by Representative Philip Barnet calling for creation of a special legislative committee to investigate.

In reply to the charges, Commissioner DeCelles said today:

"I have filed with Speaker Horace T. Cahill my approval of an investigation of the company's activites in this state.

"I hope that the investigation, if it is approved, will bring out the weakness in the present law. The present statute allows anyone, regardless of ability or character, to form an insurance company and be licensed.

"As insurance commissioner, I have filed two bills with the present Legislature which will enable the insurance commissioner to reject the charter and license of any group of persons who do not intend to carry on business in good faith.

CLAIMS HANDS TIED

"The most glaring weakness in the present law is the inability of the insurance commissioner to close a company until he has clear evidence presented to the Supreme Court and adjudicated thereby.

"I believe that the insurance commissioner should have the power given to the bank commissioner to close a company immediately upon obtaining evidence by his examinations."

Commissioner DeCelles stated that he had heard the rumors concerning the company, but under the present law he was unable to take any action against the organization until the Supreme Court had acted.

Surgeon May Save Movie Beauty

MARIE WILSON
Skull Pierced by Metal

Hollywood, March 5 (INS)—Physicians today prepared to perform a delicate operation to save the life of Marie Wilson, beautiful film actress suffering from a fractured skull.

The 20-year-old Warner Brothers player was injured in a three-car collision in downtown Holywood.

The operation will attempt to remove the metal.

The young actress was with her mother, Mrs. Hazel White, and Nick Grinde, film director, when the accident occurred.

The others were not injured.

Miss Wilson, a native of Anaheim, Cal., earned fame here for her portrayal of "dumb blonde" comedy types.

Malden Girl's Snakes Win Her Job Offers

A 14-year-old Malden girl was revealed today as a snake charmer when she received an offer to join the circus animal trainers at a New Hampshire farm this summer.

She is Phyllis Pentheny of Pine street, a pupil at the Beebe junior high school.

Phyllis, it was disclosed, has a collection of snakes—live ones mind you—at her home.

Several rattlesnakes, which she caught in the Blue Hills, are among them.

"I've been collecting snakes since I was eight years old," she said. "There's no danger if you know how to handle them."

At times her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Pentheny, have felt some trepidation, but Phyllis hasn't. She keeps her pets in boxes, some in the cellar, others behind the stove, and a few—if the weather is good—out on the back porch.

Besides the New Hampshire offer, Phyllis has received a tentative bid from the London Zoo to take some of her live specimens to England.

Phyllis is five feet tall and has brown eyes and brown hair, and doesn't look at all like what one imagines a snake charmer should look like. She doesn't know whether her parents will let her go to work as a trainer, but she feels her future is tied up with snakes.

U. S. 'SORRY' FOR TALK OF LAGUARDIA

Washington, March 5 (AP)—The United States apologized to Germany today for remarks made recently by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York about Chancellor Adolph Hitler.

The State Department said that James C. Dunn, chief of the division of western European affairs, in an oral statement to Dr. Hans Thomsen, counselor of the German embassy, said, in substance:

"The German government through its embassy here makes complaint against certain utterances of Honorable Fiorello LaGuardia in a public address at the Hotel Astor in New York on March 3, stating that such utterances seriously and severely reflect upon the head of the German state and the German government.

"In this country the right of freedom of speech is guaranteed by the Constitution to every citizen and is cherished as a part of the national heritage. This, however, does not lessen the regret of the government when utterances either by private citizens or by public officials speaking in an individual capacity give offense to a government with which we have official relations.

"I very earnestly deprecate the utterances which have thus given offense to the German government. They do not represent the attitude of this government toward the German government.

"It is our policy to conduct the official relation with other nations upon a basis of complete and mutual respect for the rights and sensibilities of each other."

Friend Whose Auto Killed Holtz Won't Ever Drive Again

Nathan Holtz, 60-year-old father of Representative Jackson Holtz of Dorchester, died today and, to add to the tragedy, an attorney who has been a lifelong friend of the son was charged with causing his death.

Holtz was struck down by an automobile just before midnight, at Blue Hill avenue and Vesta road, Dorchester, the day before the expected return of his wife, vacationing in California. Death followed soon after, at Boston City Hospital.

Attorney Paul Firestone, of Homestead street, Roxbury, operator of the automobile was horrified at the tragic accident. But when he learned the identity of the victim, he collapsed.

Charges of operating so as to endanger and manslaughter were preferred in Dorchester court, but continued for two weeks.

"I have never done anything in my life for which I have felt so deeply," Attorney Firestone told close friends.

"To think that I had to be the one to cause the death of the father of a lifelong friend and a men whom I had helped in his campoign for his honorable office. I shall probably never drive an automobile again."

A. F. of L. Battling CIO For Bay State's Control

ROBERT J. WATT

Watt for Union Peace in N. E.

Although President Green of the A. F. of L. called on the Massachusetts branch today to wage war on the CIO in the shoe industry, leaders of the state organization indicated they preferred "peaceful progress toward a common objective."

Green's orders were contained in a telegram to Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor.

Pressed by newspapermen for comment on Green's telegram, Secretary Watt and State President John F. Gatelee issued the following statement:

"The Massachusetts State Federation of Labor has received President Green's telegram and will of course co-operate in any way with the Boot and Shoe Workers International Union in

Green Rushes Fight Order

Labor's Warfare

Breach between American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization widens; Massachusetts battlefield as A. F. of L. combats C. I. O. drive to unionize shoe industry.

In Providence, 2000 truck drivers ratify agreement ending three-day Rhode Island strike; promised wage boost, 58-hour week, closed shop.

Carnegie-Illinois steel workers threaten to bolt Lewis, wire Green to "come and organize us."

Two auto parts plants strikes settled in Detroit; negotiators seek compromises in many other sit-down strikes.

Action by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor today designated Massachusetts as a major battleground in the fight between Green and John L. Lewis for control of labor unions.

Green instructed Massachusetts officers of his organization to wage war against encroachments by Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization in the boot and shoe factories.

"American Federation of Labor organizers will be assigned to lead in the fight to preserve the integrity and jurisdiction of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union," wired Green.

UNION DECLARES WAR

At the same time, John J. Marr, international president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, declared in New York:

"We will fight fire with fire.

"There are two outlaw unions, the United Shoe and Leather Workers and the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, which form the spearhead of the CIO drive in the shoe industry.

"Officials of these unions have conferred with Powers Hapgood, eastern representative of the CIO (now in Boston), and have made up their minds to go in and try to absorb our union.

"We are going to fight them."

While Green's organizers are on their way here, to strengthen all lines, the New England Council of Lewis' CIO will conduct a series of mass meetings in the next 10 days in Boston, Lynn, Lowell,

POWERS HAPGOOD

Hapgood Sees CIO Victory

"What about the CIO in New England?" he repeated. "What about it? I'll tell you.

"We won't rest until we have organized every worker in a mass production industry in New England on an industrial union basis. The day of the craft union is done."

The young man who hurled this ultimatum to industry—and to the American Federation of Labor, with its craft unions—was preaching the doctrine of John Llewelyn Lewis and Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. That has been done before.

What made this time different was that this young man was Powers Hapgood, a Harvard graduate of 1921 and the husband of the former Mary Donovan, one-time attache in Massachusetts' Labor and Industries Department.

From college he stepped into the Pennsylvania coal mines. From the coal mines he stepped back into Massachusetts' headlines in the stormy days of the Sacco-Vanzetti trials.

Today he was considerably elated over the speedy capitulation of shoe and leather manufacturers to the 15 per cent wage increase de-

Cambridge, Eng., March 5 (AP)—Mrs. Gipsy Smith, wife of the evangelist, is dead here. Smith now is in Charlotte, N. C., on a preaching hour.

The Rev. Gipsy Smith, a full-blooded gipsy, became a convert when he was 16 and went to work with the Christian Mission, headed by William Booth. Mrs. Smith, the former Annie Pennock, was one of Smith's converts. They were married in 1879.

Falling Fire Nozzle Kills E. Boston Boy

Apparently struck by a heavy hose nozzle that fell from the side of a moving fire engine, Nicholas Adinolfi, 7, of Chelsea street, East Boston, was killed today while on the way to school.

East Boston fire engines were on their way to a small fire, turning from Chelsea street into Prescott, when a fireman on a truck noticed the body of the small boy lying on the sidewalk.

SOCIALITE'S BODY FOUND IN CHARLES

Mrs. Royden W. Cheney, 44, former Brookline society woman and Mayflower descendant, was found drowned today in the Charles river on the Boston side, near Clarendon street.

Police brought the body to the surface by grappling following the discovery of a womans coat, hat and black purse on the esplanade by Patrolman Reginald Wyman of the basin station.

Medical Examiner William J. Brickley reported a verdict of "presumably suicide by drowning" and added that no autopsy would be performed.

At the same time he revealed that an unsigned note, written on stationery of a Back Bay hotel, had been found on the shore, ten yards from where the body was discovered.

The note read:

"To whoever finds these things: Please mail this coat to Virginia Vecchio, care of the Coakley-Dickerson Hospital at Northampton, Mass. Also this bag and contents."

TALKS WITH NURSE

Brickley said he had communicated with Mrs. Vecchio and found her to be a nurse at the hospital. He said she was a widow and had been a close friend of Mrs. Cheney.

The medical examiner quoted Mrs. Vecchio as saying she had been "brought up" by Mrs. Cheney and had been given financial aid so that she might complete her education.

Taken to North Grove street mortuary, pending a verdict by Medical Examiner Brickley, the body was identified as that of Mrs. Cheney by her brother-in-law, Stewart Cheney, of Dover, N. H. Of late Mrs. Cheney had been making

GREEN OPENS FIGHT ON LEWIS FOR N. E. UNION RULE

SHOE AND TEXTILE WORKERS TO DECIDE VITAL ISSUE

Framingham, Marlboro, Chelsea, Newburyport and Salem.

GREEN WANTS FIGHT

Leaders of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, branch of the A. F. of L., meanwhile indicated they believed peace could be maintained.

Green, however, in his telegram to these leaders, stated:

"I personally and officially urge all members of the American Federation of Labor to extend a full measure of co-operation and assistance in this fight."

MARA CLAIMS 52,000

The issue that has arisen in the shoe industry assumes tremendous importance because, apparently, once for all Green has recognized that the breach between himself and Lewis is irreparable.

President Mara of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union claims 52,000 members out of some 200,000 employed in the industry, and credits the opposition with 5500 members.

"We have been keeping an agreement with the C. I. O. not to interfere with each other's units," said Mara. "But we have been having trouble since Hapgood conferred with officials of those two independent unions.

"I believe they saw a chance to make a membership drive, with the help of the C. I. O. About 10 days ago they staged a strike in New England and settled for a 15 per cent. increase, but that wage is still 25 per cent. under our scale.

WARY OF STAMPEDE

"We are going to make sure they don't stampede our members into their unions."

Throughout the maturing dispute between the two major labor organizations, Green has favored organization of workers by the crafts in which they labor—such as machinists, carpenters, bricklayers and the other divisions.

But Lewis has argued for mass organization and for organization of all workers into one large union regardless of the work they do.

ON OTHER FRONTS

In Cleveland followers of the two leaders clashed, with 200 CIO workers chasing Federation organizers from entrances to the General Motors' Fisher Body plant.

The Cleveland Central Labor Union yesterday suspended unions affiliated with Lewis.

In Maryland, the State Federation of Labor, a Green organization affiliate, ordered all city central bodies to throw out Lewis locals.

Other A. F. of L. affiliates were expected by labor leaders to follow suit, bringing a clean break between Green and Lewis factions in the Federation.

Last year the United Mine Workers, which Lewis heads, as well as nine other unions, were suspended, but not expelled, from the A. F. of L. for "insurrection" in joining the Lewis C. I. O.

CIO ORGANIZING TEXTILES

At Washington today, it was revealed that Francis J. Gorman, president of the Lewis-affiliated United Textile Workers of America, will address rallies of New England textile workers during the coming week-end.

Gorman, who already is in New England, released a statement in Washington, declaring his organization has placed 100 organizers to the task of signing the textile industry's 1,200,000 workers.

Later on, said Gorman, several hundred additional organizers from other CIO unions will join in the work.

Union Demands Chrysler Fix Bargaining Question

Detroit, March 5 (AP)—A union executive said today that no other demands of the United Automobile Workers of America would be considered in its conference with the Chrysler Corporation until the request for recognition as the sole bargaining agency is settled.

"We are making no threats," said Richard T. Frankensteen, organizational director for the U. A. W. A., "but we will not drop our discussion of that point until it is settled."

Sit-down strikes continued in several automotive parts factories here, but one was settled early today and another late last night.

Strikers evacuated three units of the Peninsular Metal Products Company, employing 1050 persons, soon after an agreement between the management and the U. A. W. A. ended that dispute. The early morning hours brought an end to the sit-down which had affected 800 employes of the Thompson Products Company. The plant was to be vacated before the night shift reports this evening.

Twelve hundred employes were idle in three plants of the Bohn Aluminum Company and its subsidiary, Michigan Smelting & Refining Company because of another labor dispute.

Workers were to return today to the Ferro Stamping Manufacturing Company and it is to open negotiations with the U. A. W. A. tomorrow.

Landlady 'Sits' in Newton

Claiming she is owed several months back rent, Miss Rena Quirk of Natick staged a sit-down strike today at a house she owns in Newton. A broomstick barred her from the apartment, so she sat on the front stairs. She and the tenant will be in Newton court tomorrow to decide the argument.

Landlady Seeks Rent by Sitdown Strike

Sit-down strikes having become popular, a landlady staged one of her own in Newton today in an effort to obtain back rent from a tenant.

Declaring she is owed several months' rent, Miss Rena Quirk of Court street, Natick, arrived at a house in Charlesbank road, Newton, and took her ease on the front stairway.

While sitting, she revealed that she had attempted a previous sit-down strike in the kitchen of the premises occupied by the allegedly delinquent family.

Police were called, however, and Miss Quirk was ousted after a five-hour "sit."

When Miss Quirk arrived at the house today she found a broomstick barring her progress beyond the top of the front stairway, so she sat on the stairs.

"All I have to live on is this money," she said. "If I don't get the money from my rents I can't pay taxes. I'll tell the city that. I can't even live."

INITIAL TRUCK VIOLENCE HERE

First violence against trucks in Boston broke out tody when an oil truck was stopped on the McLellan highway, East Boston, by a group of men who partially wrecked the vehicle.

The driver called East Boston police and then announced he would inform his company, against which a strike is in progress.

Police did not learn his name or further details.

The truck, which operates out of Charlestown, had been to Revere, and was stopped in East Boston just over the Revere line.

Ignition wires were stripped from it, the battery was torn out, windows were broken, and the axle was smashed.

Silly Sits

Perth Amboy, N. J., March 5 (INS)—The sit-down technique was being used here today by union barbers to force non-union shops to charge more for shaves and haircuts. Barbers from 75 union shops lined up in the non-union establishments, and as soon as their turns came to occupy chairs they just sat while other customers had to be turned away.

Waterville, Me., March 5 (AP)—Colby men students threatened today a "sit-down" invasion of a social room in which they said they had been forbidden to continue quiet chats with co-eds. The room, in the alumnae building, had been a splendid winter substitute, they averred, for quiet strolls in shady lanes. So far, the irked students have confined their protest to picketing of three women's dormitories. They carried placards, some of which said, "give us back the playroom," "unfair to men," and "give us a break."

CIO STEEL FOES ASK GREEN AID IN WARFARE

By SYDNEY H. EIGES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Pittsburgh, March 5—Open warfare broke out between opposing steel labor groups in the Pittsburgh area today.

Irked over success of the John L. Lewis group in collective bargaining negotiations, employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation sought personal intervention of William Green in directing their battle against Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

In addition to telegraphing an appeal to the president of the American Federation of Labor, this faction temporarily scrapped its employe-representation plan and authorized a four-man grievance committee to act for them in negotiations with President Benjamin F. Fairless, company head.

RECOGNIZED CIO GROUP

Fairless, only last Tuesday, recognized the steel workers' organizing committee as spokesman for its membership and signed a one-year contract with it. The committee is sponsored by Lewis' C. I. O., whose members recently were suspended, by Green's order, from the American Federation of Labor.

The telegram offered Green the opportunity to come into the heart of the nation's teeming steel empire and battle Lewis at the home plate. It offered him the opportunity to test his espousal of craft unionism against the industrial unionism of Lewis under almost model circumstances.

It created a situation unprecedented in a steel empire that has been shaken to its very foundations by developments of the past five days.

The resolution creating the four-man committee was adopted with but one dissenting vote by the 25 of the 36 members of the Pittsburgh district council at a meeting held quietly and without fanfare in Hotel Henry, almost across the street from the towering Carnegie-Illinois building.

GRIEVANCE BOARD

The grievance committee which now becomes the executive committee is comprised of Owen Jones, chairman, of Martins Ferry, O.; Ralph H. Martin, Homestead; Joseph Budday, Duquesne, and R. Elmer Glover, of Farrell. William R. Hill, of Canton, O., president of the Pittsburgh district council is an ex-officio member.

Thus it seemed that for the present at least the council had dropped its present form of company union, apparently finding it not the type of organization to engage in a struggle with the compact Amalgamated.

The new Amalgamated is an organization whose guiding genii are Lewis and Philip Murray, International vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America. And back of the Amalgamated is the almost unlimited treasury of the CIO which is primed with full-running money lines from its constituent unions.

The telegram to Green followed by only a short time his call to all A. F. of L. unions to purge themselves of Lewis influence and Lewis connections.

Fairless has already agreed to meet with an independent union newly formed in the Chicago area.

What his attitude is towards the step today was not immediately announced.

Yellow Cab Drivers Strike in Chicago

Chicago, March 5 (INS)—Two hundred Yellow Cab Company drivers went on strike here today, and predicted their ranks would swell to 3500 before nightfall.

Oscar Koskin, strike leader, said Checker Cab drivers had agreed to join them. He added that a union which may affiliate with the CIO will be formed. Police were called to assure order.

The strikers ask a wage increase of 40 per cent of their fees plus free gasoline, claiming their paychecks average only $16 weekly.

Bethlehem Steel Plant Shut; Pickets on Duty

Lebanon, Pa., March 5 (AP)—Quiet picketing began today at the Lebanon valley plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The mills, shut down yesterday by a strike over wages and working hours, remained closed.

Several hundred workes milled about the gate, where small groups bearing lunch pails sought to return to work. These were told the shut-down would last until the differences were adjusted.

Monks Seek 'Nights Out' in 'Stay-In'

Cairo, Egypt, March 5 (INS)—The siege-striking monks of Dair-El-Muharrak today prepared to battle to the death, if need be, for their right to cigarettes and "nights out" at nearby Bedouin villages on the edge of the Sahara desert.

Behind the ancient stone and steel walls of their Coptic retreat the monkish "stay-in" strikers distributed rifles and swords and girded themselves for a battle with the 300 police already on the way to attack the monastery.

The monks, who demand a more liberal abbot, are set for a long siege, with plenty of food and a wall on the grounds.

HAPGOOD RULES A. F. OF L. 'OUT'

mand of the CIO affiliate, the United Shoe & Leather Workers' Union. But still he wasn't satisfied.

"Non-union workers must realize that their only salvation is to come into our organization," he said. "With our victory on the 15 per cent raise issue of course the demands for membership are increasing.

"But there must be unity among all types of shoe and leather workers' unions. There must be one national organization to get what we want, and that must be under the banners of the CIO."

Why is the CIO so opposed to the Federation of Labor craft union system? Does he deny that labor made tremendous forward steps under that program? he was asked.

N. E. CIO CHIEF NAMED

"The old-time craft union system could not accomplish what we have accomplished or any part of what we will accomplish under the aggressive leadership of the CIO. Labor, in the future, will have to be reckoned with more than it ever has in the past, both by industry and government," he said.

Hapgood said that from now on the CIO New England council would function steadily. Thomas Burns is its chairman. He is a rubber union leader. There are 12 other members of the executive board, each representing an industry.

Hapgood himself is secretary for this council and is considered Lewis' "right-hand man," but he smiled when asked about that.

"I'm just an ardent follower of the policies of the CIO," was his reply.

If he is Lewis' "right-hand man," or even if he isn't, it's strange to see the young Socialist aligned with Lewis.

Back in 1927 Hapgood started a fist fight at the Indianapolis convention of the United Mine Workers because Lewis barred him from even taking a seat. But that's been all ironed out. And a fist fight is nothing to Hapgood. During his career he's been shot, arrested a score of times.

"All in a day's work," he grinned, and then buried his face in a batch of letters.

Shamrocks Periled by Sit-Strike

Belfast, March 5 (AP)—There may not be enough shamrocks to go around for the Irish parade down New York's Fifth avenue on March 17, St. Patrick's Day.

Belfast's first sit-down strike broke out today. Forty girls employed in a factory which makes and ships shamrocks to the United States stopped work, demanding higher pay.

WATT FAVORS CIO PEACE

serving the interests of its members in Massachusetts.

SAME OBJECTIVE

"This is nothing new. The situation has not changed because of the fact that certain unaffiliated independent unions have chosen to group themselves together under another banner.

"We believe that the Boot and Shoe Workers Union has demonstrated for many years its ability to promote the well-being of its members.

"Here in Massachusetts we are fortunate in that the American Federation of Labor unions and the new groups aim at a common objective.

"We expect that the international unions will concentrate upon organizing the industry; and the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor will continue its efforts to accomplish fully the official legislative program which all wage-earners support.

"But in the opinion of the leaders of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, it would be indeed most unfortunate if the wage-earners should be divided by use of different methods, when we all do share a common objective."

GREEN'S TELEGRAM

This statement by Gatelee and Watt followed receipt of the following telegram by Watt from President Green of the A. F. of L.:

"The American Federation of Labor issued a charter to the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, granting it jurisdiction over all those employed in the boot and shoe manufacturing industries.

"No other organization of boot and shoe workers is recognized by the American Federation of Labor.

"Because of this grant of jurisdiction to the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, I am officially calling upon you, your associate officers and members in the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, and all representatives of the American Federation of Labor, to fight against, and to resist, any attempt on the part of any organization to encroach upon the jurisdiction of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union.

"American Federation of Labor organizers will be assigned to lead in the fight to preserve the integrity and jurisdiction of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union.

"I personally and officially urge all members of the American Federation of Labor to extend a full measure of co-operation and assistance in this fight, which I am asking you to make, in order to protect and preserve the jurisdictional rights accorded international unions affiliated with the A. F. of L."

Providence, R. I., March 5—The four-day Rhode Island truckmen strike, which was marked by several outbursts of violence that included the firing of two trucks, was officially over at 7 a. m. today.

At that hour the 2400 strikers who had succeeded in obtaining a strangle hold on the trucking situation in Rhode Island returned to their trucks.

Announcement the strike had been settled was made by Thomas J. McMahon, state director of labor, at the conclusion of a conference at the State House that began yesterday afternoon and which was finally concluded in the Hotel Biltmore, where the peace pact was signed by union officials and truck owners early today.

WAGE COMPROMISE

The agreement provides for a 10 per cent increase in wages for the truck operators and helpers; a closed shop; 48 hour week with time and one half for overtime work.

Excepting in the wage increase the truckmen won a complete victory. They were forced, however, to compromise their demand for a 25 per cent wage increase and agree to accept the ten per cent figure. Other minor features included in the agreement were no discrimination against the workers who went on strike, a party agreement; a new contract to embody all points agreed upon in former conferences, and points that are not agreed upon to be arbitrated in joint committee, with director of labor acting as chairman.

The agreements reached today are retroactive to March 1, with the truckmens' strike disposed of and both parties apparently satisfied and happy, State Director of Labor McMahon and Governor Robert E. Quinn turned their attention to the strike situation at the Perennial Mill in West Warwick.

PLAN CONFERENCE

Like the truckmen's strike, this labor difficulty has been marked by several outbreaks of violence which included the hurling of tear gas during a riot at the plant on Wednesday.

The strikers were taken unawares yesterday when a force of 25 state troopers all carrying long night sticks appeared at the Perennial plant following the riot of the day before.

A dead line has been established on all sides of the Perennial plant property for a distance of a quarter of a mile and only those persons who can show a union card are being permitted to enter through the police strike line.

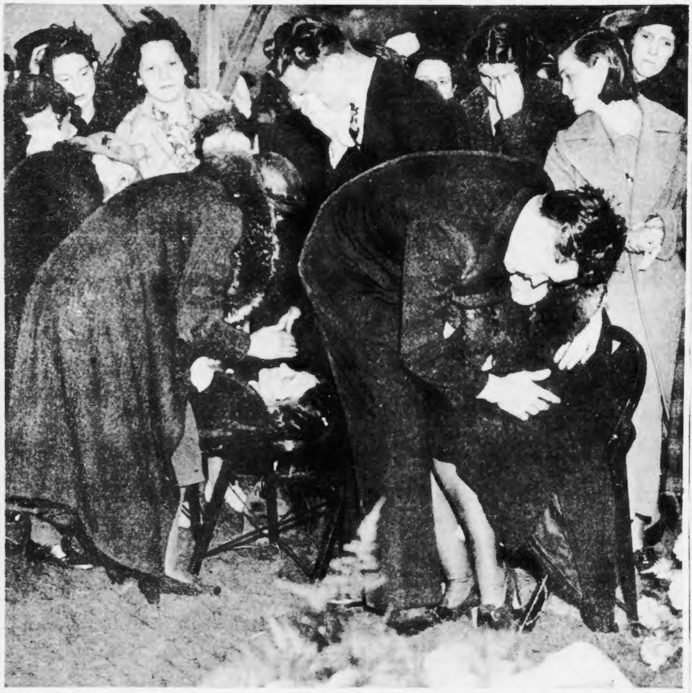
Mother Swoons at Surgery Girl's Grave



Relatives and friends wept and her mother and sister collapsed when they buried Cleo Sprouse in Charlottesville, Va., yesterday. She was killed during preparations for an illegal surgical operation which a dentist admitted he sought to perform. Her body was left in a cemetery beside the University of Virginia campus—not the cemetery where she was buried. Photo shows part of grave in foreground and Mrs. Lula Sprouse in background. A sister, Mrs. Alice Poole, is shown seated after her collapse.

LOVE Notes Called 'DECOY'

He had a woman write him three letters so he could leave them in his pocket for his wife to find, William E. Snow, Brookline chauffeur, testified in Dedham probate court today before Judge Joseph R. McCoole.

Snow is seeking a contested divorce from Adeline P. Snow of Cohasset on grounds of desertion.

Referring to the letters, before they were read as evidence, Snow said he wanted his wife to read the letters so she would speak to him. He inferred he and his wife weren't speaking to each other at the time.

Under cross-examination he said the writer of the letters was the cook where he was employed as chauffeur.

Attorney Charles R. Young, counsel for Mrs. Snow, then read the letters. The first was dated March 1, 1933. It said:

"You don't know how much it hurts having to see you go to someone else every night. No one in the world has ever shown me the tender kindness that you have outside of my own mother.

"I love you so much. It's a wonder you don't feel it." It was signed "C. T. P."

Another also dated March 1, 1933, read:

"Hello, darling, I was sorry to have to bid you such a cold goodbye, but that was not my wish. And, by the way, I didn't have my share of kisses in the short time you were here.

"Wait until Saturday, I'll make you do double duty.

"You hang around, darling, I'll be a good girl yet. But you don't think I am really bad, do you? Don't do anything I wouldn't do and remember I love you with all my heart. Always yours, C. T. P."

The third dated March 3, 1933, was:

"It was nice to see you last night. If only time did not go so fast when I am with you! No one has ever been quite so sweet as you have, darling, and coming this late in life, I guess I am a little selfish about it all.

"Be sure and call me tomorrow, angel. I love you oodles and then some. Always."

Questioning by Judge McCoole disclosed that the last name of the woman who wrote the letters was "Page."

After the letters were read, Snow denied that the woman meant anything to him. He testified he was married March 11, 1929, and that his wife left him on December 31, 1935. He said when he came home on that date he found his furniture also gone.

Mrs. Snow testified she found the letters and had spoken to her husband about them. She said they hurt her "very deeply."

Mrs. Jack Kirkland, wife of the author of "Tobacco Road," is at Reno, to climb the court barrier to marital freedom. Perhaps she's in training, as she does a bit of timber topping to help while away the weary hours.

Judge, Attorney Clash in Salem Divorce Trial

A clash between Judge Edward R. O'Brien and Attorney Joseph Reardon featured today's session in Salem Probate Court of the divorce trial of Mrs. Anna J. Harney, Boston secretary, from Raymond J. Harney.

Judge O'Brien warned Reardon not to interfere while he questioned Mrs. Harney's sister, Mrs. Mary C. Low of Brooklyn, N. Y., about alleged cruelties inflicted on Mrs. Harney.

Judge O'Brien told Reardon:

"You keep out of it. I can keep myself correct. Don't you worry about me. I can take care of myself. You take care of yourself."

A hotel register, which was supposed to have been the highlight of today's session, failed to reveal whether Mr. and Mrs. Harney spent the night, as alleged by Harney, in a Boston hotel.

Arthur Sunkerman, attorney for the hotel, produced the register, which showed the room was in the name of Raymond J. Harney.

Mrs. Harney denied the charge that she had been with her husband in a Boston hotel after she had filed for divorce. She said that she conferred with him about the custody of their 12-year-old daughter.

DENTIST GIRL-KILLER CALLED MURDERER

Charlottesville, Va., March 5 (AP)—Albemarle County officials sought evidence today to supplement Dr. R. G. Miller's signed statement on what Commonwealth Attorney W. O. Fife called the "out and out murder" of Cleo Sprouse, pretty high school junior.

Miller is in jail at Richmond.

The dentist's written statement that the girl died of chloroform as he prepared to perform an illegal operation in an automobile was described by Prosecutor Fife as "not satisfactory to us at all."

He said it was "too incomplete" and lacking many "salient details" which other officers said were contained in a midnight statement made orally between here and Richmond Wednesday night.

The prosecutor disclosed an autopsy performed by University of Virginia Hospital physicians showed the girl normally would have become a mother in five months.

Though he said he was not responsible for the girl's condition, Miller was reported to have told officials he consented to attempt an operation and borrowed a car Monday afternoon for the purpose.

They drove six miles outside of Charlottesville, he related, where the girl died "a minute" after the anaesthetic was given her.

Nye Sees Defeat Of Court Plan

Binghamton, N. Y., March 5 (AP)—U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye (R-ND) forecast "certain defeat" for President Roosevelt's Supreme Court proposal in an interview here.

Senator Nye told newspapermen prior to an address last night that it was his "personal opinion the measure cannot pass." He characterized the Roosevelt proposal as "dangerous" and "the wrong way to go about it."

Jail Weight Traps Man

Belgrade, March 5 (AP)—Life in Mitrovitza penitentiary agreed so well with Ivan Kralec he gained 18 pounds and lost his chance to escape today.

The engineer, seeking to flee through a tunnel dug to his exact measure by friends from the outside, was unable to force four extra inches of waistline through the hole and stuck fast.

Guards, summoned by his agonized shrieks, freed him.

Invalid Woman, 85, Rescued at Blaze

Springfield, March 5 (INS)—Mrs. Mary Sears, 85, an invalid, Mrs. Arthur Herbert, 28, and her two-year-old son were rescued today and 14 other persons fled to the street in night clothes when fire destroyed a three-story wooden tenement house. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Damon Runyon

From their standpoint, at least, it seems to have been a successful meeting. Delegates from 40 states were present. A new crusade against wet America was planned.

Some of the more optimistic of the drys, who are banded together under the official title of the Anti-Saloon League, predict a return of prohibition in three years.

We do not say they are wrong. Three years before Prohibition went into effect, we would have laid 100 to 1 against it, and thought we were stealing the money. We merely say that we think the prediction improbable of fulfillment.

It seems wholly unlikely that we will be in another war in three years, but it could happen. Then it could happen, too, that liquor would again be voted out as a war emergency. It is not safe to set one's self up as a seer on any proposition in these times.

In any event, the prediction was probably read with some interest by one small coterie of aging men scattered over the United States, who perhaps took little stock in it, but found themselves wishing it might come true.

Booties Broke

These aging men are the survivors of the vast posse of bootleg barons, who rose to great and sudden wealth, and influence during the prohibition era.

There were thousands of them in the days of the gold rush, which stretched across the '20's. Many are now pushing up the daisies. Some are in prison. Nearly all are broke. They handled millions and millions of dollars in their day. Few now have as many as two white quarters to rub together in their pants pockets.

What broke them was a curious thing. They were suckers—the rankest kind of suckers. When the saga of the American bootleggers of the roaring '20's is written, the story of their financial downfall will be the most interesting part.

They "went for" everything, as the saying is.

They backed Broadway shows that cost them more than they could make off a ship load of liquor. They bought racing stables that only millionaires can afford. They built hotels and opened night clubs.

Wasted Money

They put their money in all manner of dubious projects. They gambled for high stakes. They lived in the most sumptuous style. A few—but not many—were nice drop-ins for the lads down in Wall street.

The big booties literally threw their money to the birds. It came so fast that when it finally ran out it took them a couple of years to realize that the spigot had run dry. Most of them were broke by the time repeal came, and those who held onto some money lost it trying to operate "legit."

There was an element of excitement and adventure for the booties in the early days of prohibition, when most of them were young and careless.

Those were the days when they were running rum up out of the Bahamas and down from St. Pierre, at terrific risk from the elements, and the law. The old timers can tell you regular toupee-lifters of running rum in big ships right up to the docks in New York in those days.

There were gay blades who found positive enjoyment in driving the speed boats loaded with booze in from Rum Row, beyond the 12-mile limit, with the revenue men in hot pursuit.

There were others who loved the excitement of the long run down from Canada in automobiles with false bottoms, where the liquor was concealed, or sneaking boatloads past the patrols on the river between Canada and Detroit.

There was not much killing the early days. Occasionally a band of intrepid young gentlemen would slip alongside a ship, and take it, and the liquor cargo it carried, in old-time piratical fashion. But in the main they tried to avoid bloodshed.

A fellow with a little nerve could make a fair living riding a load of booze into St. Louis, or some other distant city, in those days.

Then the big combinations came along, taking over distilleries, and breweries, and fighting each other for territory, and the outfit with the best triggers took charge of the game.

The adventure of booting passed with the appearance of the gangsters. A lot of early booties were scared out by the killings. The home product made the Canada runs unprofitable. The Bahamas and St. Pierre passed as ports of call. The individual bootie went out of business.

"Fix" Stupendous

The wonder now is, of course, that the big combinations flourished as long as they did. One New York outfit had a fleet of ships at sea at one time, and is said to have handled at least $50,000,000.

Every city had its own combination that controlled the liquor and beer business in that particularl territory. The money that must have been paid for "the fix" alone throughout the country undoubtedly reached a staggering total.

What killed prohibition was the hypocrisy with which it operated, of course.

The depression, and the argument that the return of liquor would help us back to prosperity, were contributing causes of death.

But before repeal, as we have said, most of the old time booties were broke, anyway. There was no money in the liquor business by that time. Besides, the old booties found that advancing years had taken a lot of the zest for excitement out of them. The law was getting too tough.

A few have managed to struggle along in legitimate environment since repeal. They are content to live quietly, and hope that nobody remembers that they were anything but legitimate. But they would probably like to be about ten years younger, and see the drys' prediction of the return of prohibition come true.

Ethiopia Envoy Plans Vacation

Addis Ababa, March 5 (AP)—Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States minister to Ethiopia for the last two years, announced today he would leave soon for a two-months' vacation, and then await further orders from the State Department.

He said he did not know what future arrangements would be made for American diplomatic representation in the capital of Fascist-conquered Ethiopia, or whether the United States contemplated recognition of the Italian empire.

HOPE OF COURT COMPROMISE FADES OUT

Washington, March 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt's "Victory Dinner" warning that decisions by the present Supreme Court endanger democracy intensified today the dispute over his judiciary program and virtually dispelled hopes for compromise.

Congressional leaders viewed his determination to carry the issue to the people as heralding an historic struggle to reorganize the court, not because of its burdens, but frankly to encourage interpretations of the Constitution more in accord with administration objectives.

Addressing the $100-a-plate Democratic "victory diners" here last night, the President declared sharply:

"Economic freedom for the wage earner and the farmer and the small business man will not wait, like emancipation, for 40 years.

"It will not wait for four years. It will not wait at all."

SPEECH WINS FAVOR

His words were nearly drowned by cheers from the more than 1500 party enthusiasts crowding the brilliantly-lighted Mayflower Hotel ballroom.

At his press conference this morning the President said communications to the White House were running seven to one in approval of his speech.

Mr. Roosevelt, his stiff white shirt gleaming against his black dinner coat, told his audience last night what he has been saying to members of Congress, that he aspires to no third term in 1940.

His ambition, he said, is to turn over to his successor "a nation in fact, a nation at peace, a nation prosperous, a nation clear in its knowledge of what powers it has to serve its own citizens, a nation that is in a position to use those powers to the full in order to move forward steadily to meet the modern needs of humanity—a nation which has thus proved that the democratic form and methods of national government can and will succeed."

HIS LAWS OUTLAWED

In quick order, Mr. Roosevelt spoke of how the AAA, the NRA, the Guffey Coal Act, the First Railroad Retirement Act "were successively outlawed as the Child Labor statute had been outlawed 20 years before."

"You know who assumed the power to veto, and did veto that program," he reiterated after mentioning each law.

Recalling the decision which ended NRA regulation of hours and wages and the subsequent decision against a state wage law, he said these declared no legal power existed for the nation "to deal with its most difficult problems—a no man's land of final futility."

"Furthermore," he continued, raising his hand for silence, "for I'm not through yet, court injunctions have paralyzed the machinery which we created for the labor relations act to settle great disputes raging in the industrial field."

ABOUT WAGNER ACT

"We hope that this act may yet escape final condemnation by the highest court," he said, disdaining the unwritten tradition whereby decisions impending in the court are not made subject of comment by officials in other branches.

A decision in the Wagner act cases may come next Monday.

Time and again, in referring to the policies behind New Deal laws which have been invalidated, the President "defied" anyone to read the opinions of the court and tell what, if anything, could be done at this session of Congress to effect those policies "with any reasonable certainty that what we do will not be nullified as unconstitutional."

FIGHT TO A FINISH

Affirming his belief in those policies, he said:

"We cannot afford, either individually or as a party, to postpone or run from that fight on advice of defeatist lawyers.

"Here is one-third of a nation ill-nourished, ill-clad, ill-housed—now!" he exclaimed.

In short, pointed sentences he referred to the farm problem, "inadequate pay," child labor, strikes, threats of flood and dust-storms, crushing state laws, and added each time the single word—"Now!"

"If we would keep faith with those who had faith in us, if we would make democracy succeed, I say we must act—now!"

With that, he looked across the room, waved repeatedly to the cheering, applauding crowd as it stood to bid him farewell and then returned to the White House.

$100 Diners $17,730 Shy On Tips

Washington, March 5 (AP)—A group of mathematically-minded waiters eyed today the stacks of dirty dishes from last night's $100-a-plate Democratic victory dinner and calculated they were out just $17,730.

"Let's see," said a big red-headed victuals-juggler, "1800 eaters at $100 a head adds up to what?"

"Right!" chorused the rest.

"No," he corrected, "You mean it adds up to $180,000."

"Right."

"And—" he continued, looking around with a smile. "What's a gentleman's tip supposed to be?"

"It ain't enough," chimed in a thin waiter with bushy hair, but the rest managed a salvo of "Ten per cent."

"O. K.," said the leader, "and what's ten per cent of $180,000?"

"Ninety thousand dollars," spoke up a little fellow.

The red faced man shook his head.

"Ten per cent of $180,000 is $18,000," he said.

"Right."

"If there are 300 waiters," he went on, whipping out a pencil stub and an old envelope, "that's 60 bucks apiece. How much did you get, Joe?"

"Forty-five cents," said Joe.

"Well," reasoned the leader, "everybody didn't do that bad. Say we got a total of about $270."

He paused to drive home his punch line.

"Which means," he said slowly, "we lost $17,730 on the victory dinner."

"Whose victory?" asked the little fellow they called Joe.

Arlington Woman Auto Victim Dies

Mrs. Katherine M. Tierney, 54, of Everett street, Arlington, died in Symmes Hospital today as a result of injuries suffered last night when she was struck by an automobile.

The victim was crossing the street near her home when a car operated by Albert Wilson, Jr., of Yale street, Winchester, struck her, according to police.

COURT SPEECH BY ROOSEVELT WINS PRAISE

Washington, March 5 (AP)—While supporters were praising President Roosevelt's court reorganization address, opponents of his judiciary plan gave notice today they intended to continue their fight against it.

Postmaster General Farley declared Mr. Roosevelt's speech would be recorded in history as "one of the greatest ever delivered in this country."

Senator Burke (D-NEB), foe of the President's plan, said:

"I commend the President for his eloquent statement of the splendid objectives he has in mind for a better America. I utterly condemn the method by which he proposes to meet that goal."

Senator Barkley (D.), Kentucky, said the address would "put fight into the supporters of the judiciary plan both in Congress and in the country."

PRAISED BY BANKHEAD

"I regret that the President attempted to inflame the passions of the people with the implication that the Supreme Court was responsible for the dust bowl and the Ohio floods," said Senator Wheeler (D.), Montana.

Speaker Bankhead said he thought the President's address "was a crackerjack."

Representative Michener (R.) of Michigan, member of the House judiciary committee, said:

"The President makes it very clear that the real purpose of his proposal is to place men on the Supreme Court bench who will be a part of the team of which he is captain and coach."

Representative Lemke (R-ND), Union Party candidate for President in the last campaign, observed:

"The Constitution could be amended in less time than it will take to fight over the President's program."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said it would "arouse the people to realization of what the judiciary reorganization plan really means."

Secretary Wallace said, "It will make the farmer think as he has never thought before."

Senator Sheppard, (D.-Tex.) declared: "One of the greatest addresses in American history."

STATE DEMOCRATS IN VICTORY FEASTS

As a result of a series of Democratic victory dinners throughout the state last night, Massachusetts Democrats were ready today to back President Roosevelt in his drive to reorganize the Supreme Court.

More than 200 attended the dinner at the Hotel Statler, where United States Senator Patrick McCarran of Nevada praised the objectives of the Roosevelt administration and insisted that the President's attitude toward the Supreme Court was "progressive."

Other speakers included Frank H. Foy, state director of the National Emergency Council, who served as toastmaster; Joseph McGrath, chairman of the Democratic state committee; Governor Hurley and Mayor Mansfield.

At Springfield bitter-almond criticism flavored the local victory dinner as James Roosevelt, son of the President, and State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley sharply criticised U. S. Senator David I. Walsh for opposing the President on the Supreme Court issue.

Young Roosevelt said that the overwhelming vote accorded his father was sufficient proof that the people were backing him. Buckley said a Democratic U. S. senator had no business fighting the aims and ideals of the state democratic organization.

At Brockton, Congressman Arthur D. Healey blasted opponents of the Supreme Court policy asserting that the President's attitude was "sound and humanitarian."

$200,000 Catholic Church Fire Laid to Red Fanatic

Chicago, March 5—Authorities were investigating the possibility that a $200,000 fire in the Holy Rosary Roman Catholic church was the work of radical fanatic arsonist.

Michael J. Corrigan, chief fire marshal, said that evidence of incendiarism was discovered after the fire and that only before a visiting priest preached a sermon against Communism.

The sermon was delivered by the Rev. John Maguire of St. Viator's College, Bourbonnais, Ill. He reflected in his address the intense antagonism the Catholics have for the subversive and Godless doctrines of the Reds.

The blaze apparently broke out in two places simultaneously—in the organ loft and in the sacristy.

CAGE OF STEEL WIRES TO HALT LONDON RAIDS

London, March 5 (AP)—The British air force disclosed its plan today to defend London from air attack by a cage of steel cables in asking Parliament for appropriations that would boost the total 1937 cost of Britain's war machine to £269,730,000 ($1,348,650,000).

The air ministry announced its expense estimates for the current year would reach £82,500,000 ($412,500,000), or almost double the amount asked for last year.

The Royal Air Force, Viscount Swinton, secretary of state for air, announced, would be increased to 70,000 officers and men with a first line strength of 1750 aircraft organized in 124 squadrons.

Ten special units of an auxiliary airforce would be created, he declared, to operate a balloon barrage for the defense of London from the air.

20,000 MORE MEN

Huge fleets of balloons, he explained, would be sent into the sky at the first alarm of a hostile raid to drop a network of cables that would cage in the city and enchain any enemy plane that tried to dash through.

The air estimates disclosed by Lord Swinton pushed the cost of Britain's triple threat war machine beyond the billion dollar mark with its $412,500,000 addition to the $525,125,000 asked by the navy and the $410,870,000 for the army.

The air force personnel as planned for 1937, the minister said, means an increase of 20,000 men. By April 1, he proudly told the House of Commons, the Royal Air Force will number 100 squadrons stationed at home, 26 squadrons serving with the [illegible] of the fleet and 26 squadrons in the Dominions beyond the seas.

The work of organizing the metropolitan airforce, Lord Swinton said, was well advanced with orders for the balloons necessary to lay the cage over London already placed and some deliveries received.

Six factories for the manufacture of airplane engines will be completed within a few months, he said.

Thirteen new airdromes are already in use, five civil airdromes have been converted to R. A. F. use, work is under way for 26 additional sites and more will be acquired during the year, the air minister explained, outlining the bases from which Britain's augmented army of the air will function.

Cop's Home Looted

While Patrolman Daniel J. O'Connell of the Somerville police department was attending church services last night with members of his family, burglars entered his home at 37 Fairmount avenue, West Somerville and stole his police revolver, another gun and two gold rings.

Blames Rival in Death

MRS. DOROTHY MORVAN
She Sticks by Mate She Divorced

Charges Husband's Love Led to Her Baby's Murder

New York, March 5 (INS)—Blaming the "other woman" for the conditions which led to the fiendish murder of her four-year-old daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Morvan of Northfield, Vt., today sought an attorney to defend her husband in his trial for felonious assault.

Her eyes were filled with tears as she left the morgue after viewing the battered and broken body of little Joan Morvan. But she recovered her composure long enough to declare that George Morvan never could have had knowledge of the cruelty imposed upon his child.

She said, also, that he couldn't have known of the attack made upon the little girl in a Huntington, L. I., home, which caused her death from peritonitis.

Morvan is held in Queens County jail in lieu of $100,000 bail. With him is Mrs. Norma Gatto, sister of Howard Magnussen, who is charged with murdering Joan.

They are jointly charged with having beaten the little girl with hairbrushes and sticks prior to the afternoon Magnussen attacked her.

But Mrs. Morvan, who left him over two years ago, when the "other woman" came into his life, staunchly defended Morvan. She said she would join her father-in-law, George Morvan, Sr., in attempting to retain Edgar F. Hazleton, lawyer in the Ruth Snyder case, to defend her husband.

Hughes Off Again On Speed Flight

New York, March 5 (INS)—Howard Hughes, sportsman pilot and holder of the transcontinental speed record, took off from Floyd Bennett field in his speed plane today in an unheralded flight for an unannounced destination.

Field attaches said they were without definite knowledge of Hughes' destination but believed he was headed for Miami. Circling the field after the takeoff, about 7 a. m., Hughes pointed the plane directly south and soon was lost to view.

Collects $12, He's Taxed $7362.75

Camden, N. J., March 5 (US)—Dominic Zippilli, 48, proprietor of a little neighborhood grocery store and father of 10 children, threw up his hands in despair today.

Before him was a communication from the state tax department saying he was liable for $7362.75 because of his non-payment of the sales tax. Only $12.30 of it was actual tax from the small business. The rest was an accumulation of heavy penalties.

He admitted he never collected a sales tax from his customers. Said he: "They are poor like myself and couldn't afford to pay

PREMIER KING IN CAPITAL

Washington, March 5 (AP)—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada arrived today to discuss world affairs with President Roosevelt during an overnight visit at the White House.

His coming coincided with predictions on Capitol Hill that Mr. Roosevelt would re-submit the long-disputed St. Lawrence waterway treaty in this session of Congress.

The President said at his press conference today that world affairs would be the subject of a talk with the Canadian premier this evening. He said he would have tea with King late today and after dinner the two of them would sit down and talk until they were ready to retire.

King was met at the railroad station by Secretary of State Hull, Marvin H. McIntyre, presidential secretary, and other officials. He went first to the Canadian legation, being scheduled to begin his White House visit later in the day.

Goldstein on Red Bill

Recall of Davis In Moscow Urged

Massachusetts should take the lead in demanding that Ambassador Davis be recalled from Moscow as a protest against Communism, David Goldstein, noted Catholic layman and lecturer, told the legislative committee on rules today at the State House.

Goldstein appeared before the committee to oppose an order calling for the creation of a special commission to investigate Communistic activities in Massachusetts.

His opposition was based, he said, on the fact that such an investigation would provide a platform from which Earl Browder and other national leaders of the Communist party would expound "their improper propaganda."

"The time has come when Massachusets should take the leadership in pressing the national government to withdraw its ambassador to Moscow," Goldstein said. "The U. S. S. R. has broken its agreement not t opermit the distribution of subversive literature.

"Recognition of Russia is one mistake President Roosevelt has made. He was warned of the danger in recognizing the country. The Soviets hailed with joy the appointment of William C. Bullit, who was in sympathy with the Communists."

SOUGHT LANDON DEFEAT

Goldstein told the committee that orders were sent out from Moscow during the last presidential election to center their activities on combatting Fascism and defeating Alfred M. Landon, Republican presidential nominee.

"They feared the election of Landon because they believed he would do to them what Mussolini has done—drive them out of the country.

In opening his argument, Goldstein told the committee that he was the first Socialist candidate for mayor in Boston.

"I am known throughout the country as a convert from Marx to Christ," he said.

"My heart is with the proponents of this order but my head is not. I don't thing Communism is to be feared politically. I have dropped my activities against them because I feel that as a vote-getting organization they are null and void in Massachusetts.

WARNS OF TRICKS

"There is a danger in Communism as a propaganda force and they must be met. They must, however, not be made by an investigation of Communism because the term is too narrow. The only difference between Communism and the other socialisms is amatter of tactics and not the principles. One is a Trotskyite and the other is a Stalinite.

"If there is an investigation it should be national in character and you're got to know their tricks."

The principle danger from Communism lies within the trade unions, Goldstein said.

BLAMED FOR STRIKE

"They have effective minorities. They never sleep. The sit-down strike which was held in Detroit is one of their activities. The sit-down strike was originated in Italy where the Communists grabbed a metal factory in Milan and raised the flag of the hammer and sickle. It took a Mussolini to drive them out.

"I am opposed to Fascism, but I hope and pray that if such a situation arises here that some American with the courage of a Mussolini and loyalty to the country will rise up and drive them out.

"I wish we have a Calvin Coolidge in Detroit when the sit-down strike was on. Sit-down strikes would be as dead today as police strikes. I wouldn't put guns on the strikers. I would put the militia around them and starve them out."

CONANT ATTACK PERILS JOB OF SULLIVAN

Henry J. Sullivan, university extension lecturer, will lose his post as a professor of philosophy as soon as his present course is completed, it was announced at the State House today.

Sullivan drew the wrath of both Commissioner of Education James G. Reardon and University Extension Director James Moyer for his attack on President Conant of Harvard at the closing of the teachers' oath hearing.

"We cannot shut off Sullivan's course now," Director Moyer stated, "as it would work a hardship on the students who receive credits for completing it. But he will not be reemployed."

Commissioner Reardon, in addition to sending President Conant a letter of apology for Sullivan's charge that he was "invincibly ignorant," announced today the Department of Education "cannot risk intemperate speech by its employes."

Director Moyer also added that Sullivan himself is writing his apologies to the Harvard leader and that "a great deal" depends on the nature of the letter.

"Otherwise the state department is holding further action in abeyance," Moyer concluded.

Meanwhile, bitter wrangling among members of the legislative committee on education was reported as they prepared to submit their findings on the proposed repeal of the oath law.

They were reported as about evenly divided for and against, with a strong possibility that even if there is an adverse report, the Legislature will vote for retention.

The final public hearing on the bill at Gardner auditorium witnessed the Conant incident and brought a demand for order from Chairman Albert Cole.

Sullivan's remark drew a chorus of boos and hisses from the audience.

Chairman Cole, rapping for order, said:

"The reputation of the president of Harvard is so well-known in this community that we will not discuss it here."

Turning from that course, Sullivan then attacked the faculty of the State Teachers' College, declaring that many have fake and illegitimate diplomas and degrees and suggested that they either resign or be forced out by legislation.

Sullivan's remarks both as to President Conant and state college teachers brought forth the rebuke from Commissioner Reardon.

In an open letter to Conant, Reardon said:

"I sincerely regret the statement of Mr. Sullivan and feel that he has committed an unforgivable breach of professional ethics. Since he has been connected with the division of university extension I feel that it is my duty to make it clear to you that he was in no way representing the sentiment of the department of education."

In another statement dealing with Sullivan's remarks concerning the State Teachers' College, Reardon said:

"I wish also to make it clear that Mr. Sullivan's denunciation of the instructors in the Massachusetts State Teachers' Colleges, as represented by the press, was not authorized by me nor does it represent my opinion, the opinion of the State Teachers' Colleges or the opinion of the state department of education."

The final hearing saw a long list of persons identified with civic and patriotic organizations plead vigoruusly for the retention of the oath law as a safeguard against inroads of Communism and anti-democratic tendencies.

Prominent among these were former Representative Thomas E. Dorgan, father of the law; Cornelius F. Dinneen, vice-commander of the state department of the American Legion; Mrs. Susan L. Esler, vice-president of the American Legion Auxiliary; Philip S. Sandborn, national secretary of the Yankee Division Veterans' Association; Louis Aronson, past commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and many others.

Battle Against Clubs

ABC Inspectors Tell of Raids

One of the stormiest meetings so far in the current police drive against liquor selling clubs developed today at the Boston Licensing Board hearing on charges against the Lancaster Club of Roxbury.

State ABC inspectors asserted hat they were delayed at the doors f the club at 2:40 a. m., on Feb uary 23, while the doorman gave arning upstairs.

Even then, Inspector Charles R. ooth declared, there were two low Collins glasses behind the ar and one of them had ice in it. ixteen women and 10 men were the place at that hour, he also aid.

Philip J. Chapman, attorney for e club, gave the lie flatly to stimony about the ice, but Rosario LaRosa, manager of the place dmitted that this might have been .

"The glasses were in a cool pot," he explained.

Captain James F. Daley of ivision 9, who was moved out of owntown Boston recently, told the ensing board that the district ouldn't support a club of this type, nsidering the general character the neighborhood and of busi ss.

He said he wanted the place sed down at midnight on Satdays and Sundays, but no immediate decision was made on that re.

Meanwhile, police were generally prepared to take drastic steps inst any future club violations. special vote of the state board e them the right to inspect bs at any hour and take whatever steps necessary to enforce the 1 a. m. curfew.

Following a headquarters conference by members of the State Alcoholic Beverage Commission and Paul C. Ryan, representing Governor Hurley, the police department was informed that it could enter and inspect night club premises as the duly authorized agents of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Two hours of discussion resulted in the flat refusal of the commission to agree to Commissioner Timilty's demand that a blanket close of 1:30 a. m. be allowed all clubs. Part of the conference was devoted to the enunciation of suspected "hot spots" by Captain Thomas F. Connolly, recently appointed night commander of the Warren avenue division.

Captain Connolly revealed that the police must go to work immediately on 50 establishments who are flirting with the 1 a. m. closing hour.

Girl Fever Patient Picked Up After Fleeing Hospital

Miss Lena Sebastian of Kearsarge avenue, Roxbury, a scarlet fever patient, fled City Hospital today but was later picked up at her home and returned.

Doctors at the hospital were mystified as to the manner in which she was able to elude nurses and doctors in making her way from the contagious ward.

When she left the hospital she was clad only in a bathrobe, slippers and nightgown.

Police broadcast a warning that her ailment was highly contagious and warned all persons contacting her.

Shortly after the girl fled a milkman told police of station 4 that he saw a girl get into an auto on Massachusetts avenue near the hospital shortly after 6 o'clock.

The description tallied with that of the missing girl. He said the car went in the direction of Edward Everett square.

Bullet Hail Fails To Stop Car Thief

Police today sought an automobile thief who escaped after a chase through South Boston streets in which two shots were fired.

Patrolman John A. McGregor saw the car speeding up West Sixth street, South Boston, at D street and gave chase. After a hot pursuit he forced the car to the curb only to lose the driver who disappeared up a side street. He fired two shots over the fleeing man's head.

Congratulates Mr. Hearst

Gov. Hurley Pays Publisher Tribute

In a telegram to William Randolph Hearst, made public today, Governor Charles F. Hurley tenders the publisher his congratulations on the 50th anniversary of the San Francisco Examiner as a Hearst newspaper.

The Governor states that the Boston Evening American, one of the numerous newspapers purchased or founded by Mr. Hearst after he took over control of the Examiner, has rendered important service to the Commonwealth, as all the Hearst papers have served the nation.

Governor Hurley's message was as follows:

Mr. William Randolph Hearst,
San Simeon, Cal.,
March 4, 1937.

As governor of a state rendered signal service by a lusty offspring of the San Francisco Examiner, whose fiftieth birthday is celebrated today, please accept my heartiest congratulations and best wishes for continued success of the Hearst newspapers, builded by you so ably on that parent publication, and whose devotion to the true welfare of the nation is so vividly recorded down through the years.

CHARLES F. HURLEY
Governor of Massachusetts.

Mr. Hearst assumed control of the Examiner, March 4, 1887.

Coast Mayor Praises Hearst Newspapers

Special to Boston Evening American

San Francisco, March 5—Praise for the Examiner and congratulations to William Randolph Hearst came from Mayor William J. McCracken of Oakland yesterday on the newspaper's 50th birthday.

Mayor McCracken extended his good wishes and those of all Alameda county in his letter to the Examiner's editor. He wrote:

"Congratulations! I am sure the city of Oakland and all of Alameda County are pleased to extend good wishes on this, the fiftieth anniversary of the Hearst newspapers and the birth of the San Francisco Examiner.

"Mr. William Randolph Hearst has always been a champion of good government and good schools, courageous in his efforts toward both. His newspapers have aided not only San Francisco in its magnificent growth, but Oakland and all the area on the eastern shores of the bay have progressed.

"My heartiest congratulations to Mr. Hearst, the management of the San Francisco Examiner, and the management of all other Hearst operated newspapers on this golden jubilee anniversary."

WIDOW'S BODY IN CHARLES

her home at Granville near Springfield.

Identification was made after papers, found in the dead woman's pocketbook, revealed the names of relatives at Dover, N. H., where Mrs. Cheney had been staying the past three months recovering from a nervous breakdown.

At Dover, N. H., relatives stated that Mrs. Cheney had left yesterday morning for Boston to go shopping and, although she was expected home for dinner, did not return.

They said the body would be taken to Ryegate, Vt., to be buried beside that of her husband.

WED IN 1927

Mrs. Cheney was the former Alice Allerton Stebbins of Brookline and was married to Royden Winthrop Cheney at Brookline on April 2, 1927. The couple made their home in Springfield until eight years ago when they moved to Granville.

She was a member of a prominent New England family and of colonial ancestry, being a lineal descendant of Isaac Allerton, who came over on the Mayflower.

According to Constable Stanley Beckwith of Granville, Mrs. Cheney suffered a severe shock when her husband died last June. It is said she had been "mentally ill" since.

Mrs. Cheney's husband, prominent New England insurance official and Harvard graduate had been dead of a heart attack several days when his wife discovered the body upon returning from a class reunion at Keene, N. H. Normal School, from which she was graduated.

UPSET BY DEATH

Since that time, Constable Beckwith stated, Mrs. Cheney was "so upset after her husband's death, she gave up everything." He said she left Granville last fall for Westfield, where she purchased a home to establish a normal school.

Beckwith said Mrs. Cheney was expected back in Granville some time this month. He said Mrs. Cheney has one daughter, Claire, 8, who is now at Dover, N. H., staying with relatives.

Mrs. Cheney was a member of the Granville school committee for several years. She resigned that position after her husband's death. She was prominent in social and civic affairs.

According to Beckwith, she and her husband did "much for the town," making various donations to the churches, schools and libraries.

Several months after her husband's death, Mrs. Cheney was in a Waltham hospital recovering from grief and shock.

Mrs. Cheney was the daughter of the late Arthur A. Stebbins of Brookline, who was superintendent of the Montpelier and Wells River railroad, and assistant general secretary of the Boston and Maine railroad.

She was a graduate of the Spaulding High School, Barre, Vt., and also attended Boston University.

Before her marriage she was a teacher in Worcester.

Mother Bludgeons Her 2 Daughters

Philipsburg, Pa., March 5 (INS)—Apparently mentally unbalanced, a 40-year-old housewife today killed her two young daughters with a hammer, bashing in their skulls as they slept, police said.

The victims were Virginia Galley, 17, and her sister, Marie, 2, daughters of Mrs. Jennie Galley.

Police stated the woman walked calmly to the home of neighbors and informed them of the deed.

Pope's Childhood Nurse Dies at 90

Desio, Italy, March 5 (AP)—Angela Manzotti, Pope Pius' old nurse, died in a hospital last night. She was 90 years old.

She worked as a girl in a spinning mill owned by the Pope's father and later became a nurse and housemaid in the family home.

U. S. Refugees Put On Bread Ration In Madrid

Madrid, March 5 (AP)—Insurgent gunners again pumped shells into Madrid today to strafe a city besieged for four long months.

Madrilenos, however, were confident the shells fired in dark and foggy weather would cause little damage. They believed they were intended chiefly to crack their morale.

Facing possible new food restrictions, they tightened their belts. The handful of refugees in the officially-closed American embassy building were put on bread rations for the first time—half a large roll of bread each a day.

Today's shelling followed a night of bombardment and a brief lull in which the city's defenders toiled to extend their fortifications. The night shelling was believed to have inflicted some casualties.

Two of the insurgent shells landed in a plaza six blocks from the United States embassy where many Americans have taken refuge.

The Brighter Side

Saved From Crime, He Aids 17 Others

(This is the sixth and last of a series on the parole system and related subjects, on which attention has been centered by crimes committed by paroled men.)

By ALAN C. FRAZER
Boston Evening American Staff Writer

This is the story of a man who was himself saved from a life of crime, and who helped to save 17 others.

It is a story of the brighter side of the parole record of the state.

According to Deputy Commissioner of Correction Edward C. R. Bagley, there are countless somewhat similar cases. But this is his favorite.

James Leo—in camouflage his real name—lost his mother when he was five years old and his father when he was 12. He had no brothers or sisters.

He was living with relatives when he ran away from home, due in part to the influence of bad companions, who specialized in dice and card games, with nickels and dimes, behind the billboards in vacant lots.

CAREER OF CRIME

After roaming aimlessly all over the eastern part of the United States and Canada, he returned to Boston and was sent to reform school as a stubborn child.

Released on parole, he committed larceny and went back again. Again paroled, he was once more returned for stealing. Released a third time, and he was sentenced to the House of Correction for larceny.

When his term there ended, he stole again and was sent to Charles street jail. When turned loose there, he went to New York and then to New Jersey and was sentenced to the state penitentiary in that state, also for stealing.

A year later, free again, he came back to Massachusetts and with a gang of companions broke into a stationary store, where $80 worth of merchandise was stolen.

Leo was sent to the Concord Reformatory for five years.

"He is one of the worst boys we ever had," reported the reform school authorities, when Bagley started looking in to the case.

The deputy commissioner asked him what he knew that would help him earn a living, and he said the only work he had ever done was to help around barber shops and printing shops.

"I like printing," theb oy said. "If I can work at printing I'll go straight."

Bagley waited until the youth's wish was more than a wish—until it was determination. Then he had the superintendent try him out in the printing shop.

The prisoner's application to his tasks and eagerness to learn surprise the reformatory officials, and everything seemed clear for his release at the end of the first year. Under the rule at that time, he would then be eligible for parole.

But at the end of ten months Bagley received a bad report. Leo was getting into mischief and losing credit marks.

"What's he been doing?" the deputy commissioner asked the superintendent.

"Nothing real bad, but everything devilish," said the superintendent. "He starts singing and shouting and snapping elastics and disrupting good order, every once in a while."

This mischief cost Leo his release for another year, and when the second year drew near an end, he again began his "devilishness." This was repeated the third year, but at the end of the fourth, he was considered a fair prospect for release.

"What happened?" he was asked as he was about to go.

"I made up my mind to stay here till I learned the printing trade," he said. "Now, I'm ready to go out and take my place in the world. If I can get a job, I'll make good."

Later he wrote:

"I am surprised at myself, but when a fellow can make a fair week's pay there is nothing to gain and everything to lose, and liberty is sweet."

In a few years he was superintendent of a large printing plant, and when he died, a few years ago, he had left behind him, established in the trade in one shop or another, 17 boys who had come out of the reformatory like himself.

HELP MEN TO REFORM

"The trick is in getting under their hide," said the deputy commissioner. "You've got to be sure they mean to reform and then help them. If they feel they can get a job, if they try to go straight, it helps them immeasurably.

"We had a man at state prison who used to write to me saying he was determined to change.

"I stalled him off, blasted him out, told him a man couldn't go straight just by deciding overnight he was going to. When I felt he had really made up his mind I plunged in and helped him. Now he is one of our successful business men, with his black record many years behind him.

REAL HOPE IN SIGHT

"Some men never will reform. Some can't, because they're defective. But if you meet some of them halfway, they will come through for you. Prisoners should be given a chance to learn a trade in prison, something they desire to learn, if there is a chance in that shop.

"Prisoners are individuals. General theories don't go. We had several years of theorizing in this department. Men were at the head of it who started with a theory and set out to prove they were right. We were even forbidden to advise heads of the various institutions. They were left to go it themselves.

"Things are changed now and there is a real hope of restoring the state to its former excellent position in the field of penology.

"The efforts of Commisisoner Lyman to secure a new reformatory, a new state prison, and the removal of the insane prisoners from the state farm to the Department of Mental Diseases, as well as the giving of an opportunity properly to house the defective delinquent charges at the state farm, is most assuring.

"With these new institutions, there will be a better opportunity for proper classification so that we may be able to take out of the various institutions some of the types housed there who really should be separated.

"By this process, better results can be obtained, and this is what Commissioner Lyman has in mind. He is certainly doing his bit in trying to bring this about.

"In this effort to improve the prison service of Massachusetts, I feel that Commissioner Lyman should have the support of all newspapers and citizens to assist him in this necessary improvement, and Massachusetts will be by far the gainer."

PROBE CHARGES OF RACE 'FIX'

The federal government's drive against bookies alleged to have inspired thefts by bank and postal employes today turned toward an investigation of race fixing at Bay State tracks.

First move was the issue of a summons to Adnah Neyhart, secretary of the State Racing Commission, to appear before the federal grand jury today.

Neyhart has been instructed to bring with him the commission's records in connection with races run here last summer.

Already the jurors have considered a wealth of evidence tending to show that bookies have induced by threats or promises of more returns many bank and postal employes to pilfer funds for betting purposes.

Yesterday four bookies testified before the body and it is expected that a like number will appear today or later in the week.

Cardinal Dougherty Is Hailed on Coast

San Francisco, March 5 (UP)—Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, distinguished Catholic prelate, received the homage of hundreds of San Franciscans here.

His Eminence, homeward bound from the recent International Eucharistic Congress in Manila, which he attended as Papal Legate, was guest of honor at a huge reception given by the Archdiocesan Council of the National Council of Catholic Women.

Cardinal Dougherty told his listeners:

"Christianity has its troubles like the rest of the world. In some countries, in some times, those who would destroy the church attack it and are, for a time, successful. For every one they drive away from the faith, for each martyr to the church, there springs up a hundred, a thousand, to take his place. The church is eternal.

"The Catholic church is unalterably opposed to Communism. That is no secret. The church is fighting it throughout the world and will continue to fight it until the things it stands for are defeated. The church has fought against more bitter foes than Communism and has won. It will win again."

The Cardinal will depart today for Philadelphia, his see city.

Utilities Foe Wins Toll Phone Suit

New York, March 5 (UP)—James J. McCoy, a foe of public utilities corporations, triumphed in his suit against the New York Telephone Company for $3.85 in overcharges on long-distance calls.

A six-man jury found for the plaintiff, but it did not stipulate the amount of the verdict. McCoy testified he timed 37 toll calls. He contended some of the calls were within one-tenth of a second of the time allowance. But the company records showed these calls to range from 8 to 20 seconds beyond the time allowance.

Pung vs. Bus Row May Halt Mails

Arysville, Cal., March 5 (AP)—Strawberry valley waited for the postman today while a controversy brewed over whether he would arrive by sleigh or motor bus.

County supervisors, backed by armed guards, said he would arrive by sleigh or not at all. They claimed his motor bus was ruining the road, softened by melting snow.

But Warren Shingle, the postman, rebelled at using pony express methods.

"I'm carrying the mail," he said. "They can't make me haul it in a sleigh."

Retorted W. T. Ellis, chairman of the supervisors: "He won't go through today," then posted armed guards at Woodleaf, on the route.

EXTRA POLICE HUNT WOMEN SLUGGERS

More than 50 Boston police officers from four stations were assigned today to run down women attackers in Boston, while in Cambridge a special police detail of 16 plain clothes officers was detached for similar duty in that city.

A steady stream of reports on new forays by annoyers of women and on activities of Peeping Toms and prowlers in general led to formation of the police details.

Since yesterday, police of Cambridge have been seeking the "silent slugger" who mercilessly beat Mrs. Ann Connor, 32, of Chatham street, Cambridge, near her home, and Miss Sybil Chubb, 29, of Jay street, Cambridge, directly in front of her residence.

OTHER VICTIMS

And new reports were in Cambridge police hands today.

Miss Frances Lynch of Banks street, Cambridge, was accosted by a youth of about 17 while she was crossing Hoyt Field, not far from her home.

Another Cambridge woman telephoned police that a man was annoying a girl in Langdon street, but when police arrived the man had vanished.

Early today, Miss Jean Gagnon, preparing for bed in her Oxford street room, saw the face of a man peering through her bedroom window. She hurriedly drew down the shade, but even while she was calling police the man was rapping on the window. He was gone when officers reached the house.

SUSPECT SEIZED

In the North End, Boston police arrested Pasquale Scardetti, 28, of 27 Clark st., in connection with the attempted assault on Miss Vivian Horne of 23 Plain street, Dorchester. Police allege that Miss Horne identified Scardetti as the man who gave her a job in his restaurant a few days ago and persisted in making unwelcome advances.

Police were still looking for the man who punched Mrs. Ruth E. Faurer, 28, in front of her home at 171 Forest Hills street, last night. Neighbors found her semi-conscious and hysterical on the front steps.

The assailant was supposed to have run into Franklin Park after being frightened off by Mrs. Faurer's screams. A thorough search of the park failed to produce the attacker.

Kitty Quits Kits, Lifted From 35-Ft. Shaft to Safety

Marietta, Ga., March 5 (AP)—Well, they finally rescued Kitty from the porch column to the relief of Marietta's entire population.

Kitty is well known. She is of alley cat variety, but with personality plus. Her many friends thought she reached the ultimate when she climbed a tree and had kittens in a squirrel's nest, but that was last year.

FELL DOWN COLUMN

Last Friday she crawled or fell from the attic, 35 feet down the foot-wide opening in one of the four-foot thick, brick and concrete columns of the old Sessions house, where she lives.

Her plight—and that of her new offspring—was discovered Tuesday. A web ladder was constructed, but Kitty wasn't ladder conscious. A basket stuck in the opening. Finally food was lowered and gratefully received while friends went into a huddle.

Firemen and mechanics said it would be almost impossible to cut through the column, three bricks thick and covered with plaster, without endangering Kitty. The outlook was far from bright until late yesterday.

DESERTS OFFSPRING

Then Mrs. Frank Wellons, who lives in the house, tied a rope to four corners of a burlap sack, and lowered it down the shaft. Kitty immediately climbed aboard, curled up snugly, and was hoisted to freedom.

Her kittens, of undetermined number, remain in the shaft. Pending their rescue, a stout board covers the opening in the attic to prevent kitty from re-entering her make-shift maternity ward.

Pumping Station Urged in Newton

Unless a new pumping system is installed, Newton faces a severe water drought next summer, Joseph J. Murray, water commissioner, revealed today.

Newton now borrows 3,000,000 gallons of water yearly from the metropolitan water system, he said, and if the antiquated system should break down a period of not less than 16 hours would be required to get the water back in circulation.

Truth in Ads

New York, March 5 (AP)—The man who inserted an advertisement in the public prints apparently makes public confession of being a victim to Tin Pan Alley's delusions about tumbledown shacks.

It read in part: "Tumbledown house on hilltop for sale . . . no babbling brook . . . bad golf,-shooting, fishing, etc. . . . dump near house, with skunks, rabbits and field mice rattling around . . . domestic problems terrible."

The house, in a Connecticut town, is up for $29,000

"Sandy" of Bond's!

"I can't hold it any longer, me lads"

I'm fair bursting wi' a rare bit o' gossip! For two weeks, I've been snoopin' around the Bond factory, in Rochester—gettin' an eyeful o' the new things for Spring. And have my old optics bulged wi' amazement! You see, I'd been readin' in the papers that woolens were doin' some fancy high-flying. So in my canny way, I figured Bond prices would be upped, this Spring. But no such thing! In spite o' changing conditions, I can tell ye that there'll be no changes at Bond's. There'll be no increase in Bond prices. There'll be no decrease in Bond quality. There'll be no let-down in Bond service. And this, me lads, should be a bonnie bit o' news for all of ye! ★ Speakin' o' service—remember to 'charge it' the popular Bond way when ye buy your Spring clothes. Ye can pay a wee bit at a time—weekly or twice a month. And ye pay not a penny extra for this convenience. ★ I've always held that the Bond folks had a braw bit o' Scotch about them. 'Tis as plain as can be, once you've seen the grand Spring suits they're bringing ye, at these thrifty tariffs.

2 New Air Safety Aids

Radio Equipment To Be Improved

(This is another of a series of articles on safety in air transportation.)

(Special to Boston Evening American.)

New York, March 5—Two amendments to the air commerce regulations just announced by the Bureau of Air Commerce are expected to do much to increase safety in air transportation.

The amendments, which require all air line aircraft to carry static-free radio direction finders and antenna systems, do not become immediately effective. The dates when they do become effective were set far enough in the future to permit the perfection and testing of available equipment.

Aeronautical engineers of the Bureau of Air Commerce and of the air lines themselves are now at work perfecting the equipment and the progress that is being made makes them confident the equipment will be fully perfected by the time the new amendments become effective.

DIRECTION FINDERS

One of the amendments, effective January 1, 1938, pertaining to the use of radio direction finders on all scheduled air line aircraft is as follows:

"There shall also be installed in such aircraft an approved radio direction finder, covering at least the frequency range of 200 to 400 kilocycles.

"The design of the radio direction finder shall be such as to permit its regular operation in the taking of line bearings on any station to which the direction finder may be tuned without altering the course of the aircraft.

"The radio direction finder shall also be provided with means for the elimination of interference commonly known as rain, snow, sleet or dust static. The radio direction finder shall provide means for audible reception of radio range and weather broadcast messages."

ANTENNA SYSTEMS

"There shall also be installed on such aircraft an approved radio antenna system, which has for its purpose the collection of radio range signals, weather broadcast and emergency messages transmitted within the frequency range of 200 to 400 kilocycles.

"The design of this antenna system shall be such as to eliminate insofar as possible, consistent with the advancement of the art, that type of interference known as rain, snow, sleet or dust static.

"This antenna system shall be so designed that it will operate efficiently when used in conjunction with a receiver installed aboard such aircraft which has for its primary purpose the reception of radio range signals, weather broadcast and emergency messages."

These requirements grew out of the air line safety conference held under the auspices of the department of commerce at Washington February 4, 5 and 6.

Anglers Spend 500 Million For Sport

Washington, March 5 (UP)—Here's another fish story.

Anglers of America put 500 million dollars into circulation during the past year. This was a new high for the piscatorial pursuit.

Sea Yields Bodies Of 2 Plane Victims

San Francisco, March 5 (UP)—San Francisco Bay gave up two more of the 11 victims of the air liner crash.

The body of Harry D. Friedlander, 42, Los Angeles business executive, was recovered and later the body of [illegible] "Frank" [illegible] was found by a United Air Lines searching party.

Fisherman Wins Race to Ill Baby

Victory over death crowned the mercy dash of the Coast Guard patrol boat Faunce today and a young Dorchester father ended the longest 206-mile ride he had ever taken.

[illegible]

"I telephoned Carney Hospital just as soon as I jumped off the Faunce at Commercial Wharf," Pitman said. "They told me the baby was better. Then I hurried home.

"Thank God everything turned out as it did. It was the longest 206 miles I ever rode in a boat. I couldn't sleep, and I didn't want to eat. I was nearly crazy with fear."

[illegible]

"Case urgent. Man badly in need of hospital treatment. Harry."

[illegible]

"I was out in a dory, working on some trawls," Pitman said. "Then they shouted to me. I went sick to my stomach when I heard my name. I knew something was seriously wrong.

"They told me to get on the Faunce. When I did they told me the baby was in a critical condition and that my wife and Michael were also sick.

"From then on it was awful, the suspense, I mean. The crew of the Faunce was swell to me and did all they could to keep my courage up, but you can imagine how worried I was."

COULDN'T REST

The Faunce raced as fast as it could all the way, but it seemed to me it was crawling. I tried to rest but I couldn't.

"When we put into the harbor this morning I couldn't get off the boat quick enough."

"I could hardly hold the telephone when I called the Carney. Then they told me the baby was much better and had a comfortable night. What a relief."

[illegible]

Well, perhaps they could be, but stardom would have to be thrust upon them.

Good Example

When Lombard started out as an extra she stuck pretty closely to that set of rules which Director Leisen recited. She never let an opportunity pass [illegible]

[illegible]

"That slam-bang work with Sennett is standing me in good stead today," she told me. "It taught me to be myself because it overcame all my self-consciousness.

"After months of jumping into bath tubs, sitting in collapsible chairs, riding in automobiles which fell apart and emoting wildly and foolishly before a camera, I couldn't feel self-conscious about any kind of acting now."

[illegible]

"Take stock of yourself, of your face and your figure and your talents. Then if you are absolutely sure that you have what it takes to become a star, keep on trying. But if you know in your heart that you'll never be anything but an extra, get out of this movie business before it gets you."

[illegible]

"Perfectly moulded faces don't seem to mean much photographically," she said. "Nothing stands out and the face is forgotten.

"If you'll stop to think of it, you'll realize that most of the stars have 'trade marks' in their faces. For instance, Joan Crawford is known for her too large eyes and her mouth. Claudette Colbert is remembered for the width of her face at the eyes. And I think my face is best known for my jaw line which I used to be so ashamed of."

[illegible]

"Don't try it."

"You [illegible] 'in a hospital' Miss Paula" [illegible]

An [illegible] dietitian, nurse and general factotum all rolled up [illegible]

[illegible]

"No word yet from Les?" [illegible]

"He's probably sleeping on it [illegible] too [illegible]" "No word yet from Les?" He— [illegible]

"Les this time, sure as fate," and ran gaily into the hall.

[illegible]

More Trouble

[illegible]

"Poor rummy—" the younger girl pouted. "I wonder—" Her voice quickened in eagerness. "At lunch tomorrow." Must be something horribly important. He usually just grabs a bite in the serve-self with the other boys in the shoe department.

[illegible]

Glad Les didn't stay [illegible]

[illegible] I need yards of sleep. Better tuck into bed too, Paul. You look all tired out." [illegible] Night, sweetness.

[illegible]

"Everything's—all right," the sleeper murmured. "New York—and Les." Then she awoke. "That you, Paul? I was dreaming of Les and my wedding dress. Must tell him all about it tomorrow at lunch. Picture me all dolled up, eating with him at the Manchester." Her voice dropped away. She was fast asleep again.

[illegible]

One [illegible] of jewel ear [illegible]

The next [illegible]

"Gone for Good

Then Paula was aware that [illegible] she had been expecting [illegible] Lilian would come home to her [illegible] needing comfort.

"Ill, dear?" Paula asked, divided between fear and sympathy as her arm about Lilian she guided her up the steps.

[illegible]

What am I going to do—now?" Her thin cry cut across the [illegible] "He can't—be gone for always."

[illegible] "I don't want to live," she wailed once, near hysteria.

[illegible]

A Cruel Blow

[illegible]

"You know Les said he'd take me to lunch," she began brokenly.

[illegible] comfortably [illegible]

"Well, I was w-waiting near the f-freight elevator where we always meet, but Les didn't come, and didn't come. Pretty soon Billy Moore—you know he roomed with Les—strolled up and began to sing 'your sweetie went away,' remember that silly old song—"

[illegible]

If She Knew!

"He loves me. You won't believe it, of course," Lilian gasped. "You don't like Les. You can't forget I told you he was forever falling in and out of love. But that was before he met me. You don't know the real Les. He's simply marvelous."

[illegible] "Les said he never knew a girl like me before. He said I've brought out the best in him and with me he could have been tops. Now he's gone—and we were—I'll die if he doesn't come back to me."

Her uneven breathing at [illegible] her eyes narrowed [illegible]

"There, there, darling," she [illegible] "You don't understand. You can't. You've never been in love."

[illegible] If [illegible] knew the truth? How she would despise her for giving her heart unasked!

"Perhaps I can understand even if I—" she began humbly, but Lilian, as always, saw only her [illegible] in the mirror of her mind. She interrupted, her face pinched with pain. "I can't believe Les is gone—I don't know where—never see him again—never hear from him—Oh, God, I can't, can't stand it—go on alone. I tell you I can't live without Les. I won't—live—"

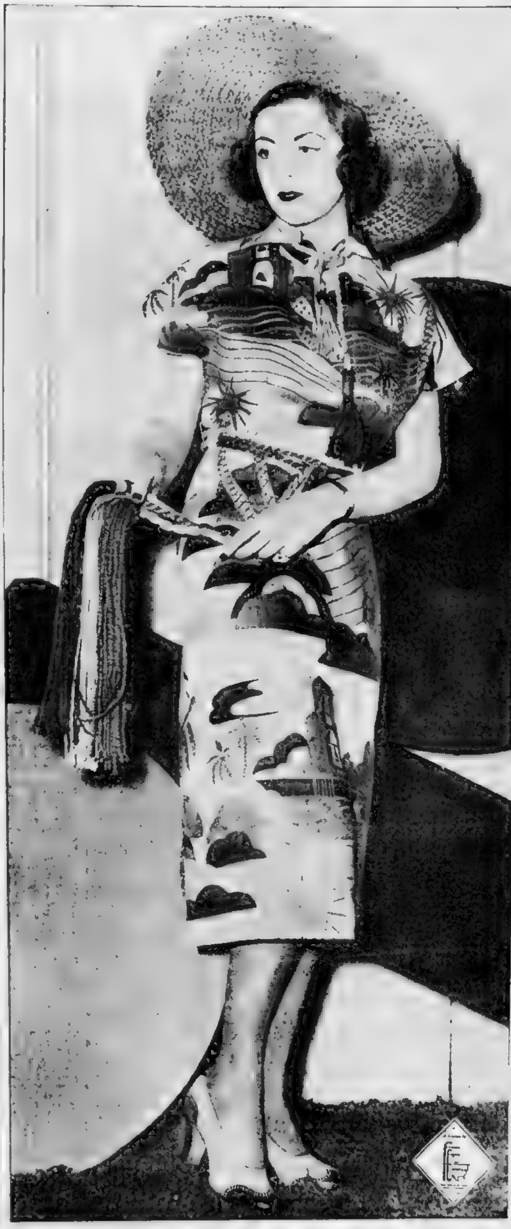
Bold Linens Vie With Sun



CALIFORNIA and Florida may be traditional rivals in Rotarian circles . . . but when it comes to fashions, they get together with a distinct style bang! All of smart Palm Beach has been having much fun wearing garish prints in little frocks of severest cut. It's as much the thing to do as living all day at your Beach Club with your face shiny and your hair tied up in bows . . . and dancing the nights away on the sun decks of your friends' houses, turned into romantic moon decks for the evening.

In sun-baked colors of adobe and tawny browns and orange on a deep, natural background, the Californian motifs of old Spanish missions and palms, and the rolling hills, all tell the story of early California . . . and the whole thing is tied up in three-toned ropes, heavy as those used by the monks . . . these all spell the chic that sun seeking women want. And because it is the once-in-a-while sort of frock to be worn only when the mood is hard upon you, and therefore not exactly a summer staple in the wardrobe, it is quite cheap (around sixteen dollars). Wear it with brilliant sandals, open fore and aft, or with spectator pumps like those Miss Leslie Blake models. And a huge, crownless cartwheel of rough straw with a bandeau of braided raffia on top.

For shopping information on this Fashion Congress selection, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Correct Foot Deformity in Infancy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

A CHILD who is deformed is apt to be the subject of ridicule by his young playmates. Growing older, he becomes more sensitive about his deformity.

One such deformity is called "club foot." It is too often seen in young children. One or both feet may be involved. The foot is dropped and deformed, making it resemble a club.

If medical attention is obtained during early childhood, it is possible to overcome this deformity. But if the trouble is neglected until the bones become firm and permanently molded, correction is more difficult. Even then, however, it is possible to correct the deformity, but an operation will be necessary.

METHOD OF CURE

If proper measures are taken at once the deformity can be corrected by manual manipulation. After the foot is returned to its normal position by one skilled in the treatment, it is kept in place by the application of a plaster of paris bandage.

This hardens into a cast which is kept for several weeks. Then [illegible], a supporting bandage.

A club foot is usually the result of some injury received at birth. It may follow some accident or physical condition occurring after birth. Regardless of what the cause is, medical science is today equipped to correct this deformity and prevent permanent disability.

There is no excuse for allowing physical defects and bad posture to continue during childhood and persist through life. Of course, there are some conditions that cannot be corrected, but as a rule most of them respond to treatment.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Consult Tape Measure For Symmetry

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

BEAUTY'S curves are determined by structure, and there is no chart that can tell you to the nth degree what your measurements should be. However, for symmetry, there is the same proportionate difference between the pivotal measurements in all figures.

This is a good point in your reducing program to re-measure, to see if you are losing in the right places. Start with the framework of the chest, to estimate the correct measurements of waist, bust and hips.

Pass the tape around the back and under the arms, drawing it together above the bust. Record the chest measurement. Now bring the tape across the center of the bust, drawing it lightly. A proportionate measurement may exceed the chest by one to two and one-half inches.

Now, for the waist measurement. In the streamlined figure, the waist is slenderer than the bust by at least seven inches. In some of the loveliest figures, the difference is as much as nine inches. An overgrown waist is disastrous to any figure.

Hips, the problem measurement of the feminine figure, outstrip symmetry when they exceed the bust measurement by more than two inches. In measuring the hips, keep the tape level and pass it around the largest area to include the derriere [illegible] it's all hips in effect.

The thigh is not one of the pivotal measurements, but shapely thighs are extremely important to beauty. Take this measurement [illegible] the center of the upper leg, or approximately ten inches above the knee.

The thigh measurement also varies according to structure. Venus' thigh measurement is estimated to have been twenty-two and one-half inches. The modern five-foot-four Venus has a thigh measurement of twenty to twenty-one inches.

The calf measurement differs widely in the standards for various types. The average for five feet four inches ranges from twelve to thirteen inches. Take this measurement at the fleshy part of the leg.

Beauty, you see, is curved according to structure. For both normal weight and symmetry depend on framework.

The new leaflet, "Spot Exercises for Symmetry," will help you to correct any disproportionate measurement. The leaflet concentrates on the pivotal measurements for the redistribution of weight.

I COULD have called down blessings upon Bob Gibbs' head for convincing Roderick that the credit for the capture of the bass belonged to the boy.

Roderick, eyes suddenly bright again, shook the tumbled hair back from his forehead.

"No, he hadn't taken the hook before you handed me the pole," he said, with a note of restored hope in his voice. "I saw him strike at the hellgr-hellg—" he floundered helplessly.

"Hellgramite, son," Mr. Gibbs said helpfully, emphasizing the syllables.

"You've fished before, haven't you?" Mr. Gibbs asked.

"Oh! yes, sir," Roderick answered, "but never for bass, and I never got a big fish—that mattered—" he sent a quick, furtive glance at Junior, "on a pole that wasn't my own. And I've got to be sure about this one. I've got to," the note of desperation returning to his voice.

"Shut up! Rod!" Junior struck in scornfully. "I s'pose you're thinking about that race of ours, like the goop you are. The fish is yours. I'm not beefing about it. Why don't you stop crabbing about your luck? I'll bet I beat you with a bigger one before a week."

He turned to Mr. Gibbs engagingly, while I puffed up with pride in the fashion Dicky would outrageously describe as "like a poisoned pup."

"You see, sir," he said, "Rod and I had a bet on which would catch the first big fish up here. And now Rod, the crazy kid, is running around trying to dodge the credit for this one. I hope you can settle it, sir, for I don't want any mistake about it. This is his fish, and I want it out of the way so he can take up that bet of mine about catching a bigger one before a week. Are you on, Rod?"

Roderick's eyes sought those of Mr. Gibbs again.

MERELY HIS DUTY

"You're sure, sir?" he said.

"Never surer of anything in my life," Mr. Gibbs assured him. "Up here, when a lot of men go out fishing together, they often hold each other's rods, and it doesn't matter a rap whose rod it is when a fish strikes. That fish always belongs to the man holding the rod, and nobody else touches it while he's playing the fish.

"Now, if I'd helped you by holding the rod or reeling in the line or anything like that, it would have been a different story, but, remember, you did every bit of this yourself. And a mighty good job, too," he finished appreciatively.

"But you told me things to do," Roderick said stubbornly.

"That was my duty as a guide," Mr. Gibbs replied, and I wondered how in the world he managed to preserve a straight face at this astounding assertion.

ROD IS CONVINCED

I decided that it was time to intervene.

"Don't you think it's about time to be convinced of what Mr. Gibbs is telling you, Roderick?" I asked quietly. "It's your fish. Everybody knows it, and you've won your bet with Junior fairly. Now, suppose you get your fish off the hook, and let us all get back to fishing. We haven't so very much time."

Roderick's sigh of relief was more convincing than words.

"O. K." he said, and then put his hands upon the landing net gingerly, evidently doubtful of his ability to get through the task awaiting him, but doggedly determined to go through with it.

Pitfalls of Speech

ARE you sure of your pronunciation? Or have you a sneaking suspicion that people may be laughing at boners you don't know you make.

Even a movie ad can trip you if you're not quite certain of your speech.

Do you make the mistake of announcing that "ROmance PerFERRED" is playing at the LYEsium TheAYter? Of course there will be raised eyebrows. You should say "RoMANCE PriFERRED" at the LySEEum THEEater.

Do you read headlines this way? GUVment Men Trap ALLEEJD Robbers. MuniSIPal LIEberry Burns. It's just as easy to correctly sound the "ern" syllable in government, say aLEJD for alleged, muNISipal for municipal, LIEbrari for library.

Do the department store ads stump you? Or can you smoothly say "sheek akSESoriz" for chic accessories, "SHIFfon negliZHAY" for chiffon negligee, "BOOdwahr" for boudoir, "boLAYro" for bolero.

A few minutes each day on our 40-page booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," will give you confidence that your speech is right. Get rid of the "second-rate" feeling of not being sure. Learn to avoid pitfalls of speech.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

FRED HOEY Writes:

Hello everybody: This is Fred Hoey speaking

Many fans have the mistaken idea that the job of coach with a major league club is a sort of pension job, with nothing to do but draw pay checks twice a month. On the contrary there are many duties connected with this assignment, which, if faithfully performed, have considerable bearing on the success of the club.

FRED HOEY

We have seen isolated cases where broken down ball players, selected for coaching duties, found it irksome even to walk fast. We suspect these lazy players furnished the original inspiration for sit-down strikes.

To be a successful coach, one first of all must know his baseball, then impart it to his pupil. Through it all he must stress pep and hustle. The Boston Bees last season were a fine example of this hustle. A zippy coach on the lines can provide pep in a game that has become dull and flat.

PENNOCK SMART

ONSLOW WAS SMART "UN"

Now that he is no longer of the Red Sox we can state publicly for the first time that Al Schacht, all unconsciously, nearly ruined many of the broadcasts from Fenway Park. Al used to urge [illegible] his famous whistle.

[illegible]

Take the case of Jack Onslow, former Red Sox first base coach. He had a unique method [illegible] the enemy. Jack would start telling funny stories to the enemy's first-sacker and successfully divert his attention from the game at hand.

Now we'll name the All-American [illegible] Clark Griffith, [illegible] Washington; Benny Myers, leather-lunged cheer leader [illegible] Phils, and Mike Kelley, dug out of the sticks by Donie B[illegible].

One performance by any of [illegible] doubled their output.

Griffith was stationed at [illegible]. He had a ringing voice and it just seemed as though he [illegible]. He was a fighter, and he made the [illegible].

Burt Shotten, then the Phils manager, [illegible] have picked up Benny Myers after the latter [illegible] to the stockyards. A hog-caller de luxe [illegible].

We always rated [illegible] Benny Hart [illegible] as No. 1 in voice volume, but Jimmy [illegible] of [illegible] Myers guy.

Mike Kelley had an exas[illegible] of nagging [illegible].

Luckily these All-American [illegible] were in Boston for only three or four days. So it wasn't [illegible].

Kurtsinger Wins $500 Prize

By the Associated Press

Charlie Kurtsinger and Hubert LeBlanc are practically assured of the $500 which will be awarded to the leading veteran and apprentice jockeys at the close of Hialeah Park's meeting Saturday. Kurtsinger is setting the pace for the full fledged pilots, with 34 winners, a lead of seven over Jimmy Stout.

J. E. Widener, head of Belmont and Hialeah Parks, has sold at least five horses within the last year which would have proven mighty useful in his own stable. Infantry, Rushaway, Fencing, Sceneshifter and Par all developed into high class performers after leaving the Widener barn. Par, the last to be sold by Widener, went to H. W. Jackson for $4500. The day after being sold Par ran six and a half furlongs at Hialeah Park in 1.16 2-5 to win in a gallop. The time was only three-fifths of a second off Snark's world record.

By BILL GRIMES

Although he has repeatedly declared that he wasn't the least bit worried over the failure of Jimmy Foxx and Mose "Lefty" Grove to send in their signed contracts, General Manager Eddie Collins was in a jovial mood today, when he received word from Manager Joe Cronin that "Double X" had agreed to terms.

It was only natural for Collins to get hot and bothered with Foxx and Grove out of line.

Foxx is the powerhouse of the Red Sox machine, and Grove is "tops" among the pitchers. The Yawkeymen would be a sad look[illegible]

STEEL INDUSTRY

Wages Up FASTER THAN Prices

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State and Wall Streets are still talking about the increase in steel wages and the subsequent increase in finished steel prices. Statisticians are delving into past records and generally coming up with the information wages are up more than prices.

The latest increase in wages establishes a new all-time high record for common labor at a level three times that prevailing in the pre-war era.

Since September, 1915, composite steel prices have been advanced just under 2 per cent. Meanwhile, steel wages have risen almost 300 percent. Thus it would appear that labor has not benefited at the expense of consumers. And the farmer are now far better off than in the 1910-1913 period when common labor received but 17½ cents an hour compared with the 62½ cents decreed this week and contrasted with 38 cents per hour in 1929.

* * *

Fear of a cotton textile strike are spreading if buyer interest in finished fabrics is a criterion of what those surrounding the industry think. The speed with which the steel industry capitulated to CIO demands is said to have speeded plans for unionization of textile workers and most observers feel the only question is where the first blow will fall. As one of the most decentralized industries, cotton is a difficult problem for organizers. Spread through the North and South with varying wage scales, it is difficult to believe that general action can be attempted by the unions until the industry is organized much more completely than either the steel or motor industry. At least that is our opinion.

* * *

Notebook: One of the bigger stock market services sent out a special letter to clients saying a definitely bullish attitude toward the market is now warranted . . . And it has been more or less clinging to a stand-off if not a bearish attitude . . . During periods of minor weakness an increase in commitments is advised . . . In such issues as American Rolling Mills, Steel Foundries, Coast Line, Curtis Wright "A", Great Northern preferred, New York Central, Vanadium and Worthington Pump . . . International Nickel and Kennecott are the favored metals.

* * *

Stock prices have only to receive an upside confirmation from the rails to be on their way to higher levels in the opinion of most good observers. The small dip late yesterday may well take the place of the one expected after the rails go through on the upside. Consequently new buying need not be put off too long. In general, it is quite possible that any declines witnessed in the near future will be of minor proportions and traders and investors will gain little by waiting for them and they might miss out altogether by such a program.

* * *

Boardroom Briefs: Detroit Gasket will show earnings for 1936 of about $2.40 per share . . . The big expansion program planned by White Motors for this year will double production facilities . . . It is expected to be completed within the next year and one-half . . . The stock is still one of the real long term favorites of this writer . . . U. S. Rubber has possibilities of earning $6 to $8 per share in 1937 . . . On the common stock as presently outstanding . . . We add this because several recapitalization plans are now under consideration, according to the reports we hear.

STOCKS Digest Profit TAKING

RAILS, STEELS FEATURE

New York, March 5 (INS)—The stock market digested moderate profit taking through the second hour to maintain the better part of earlier gains running to more than 5 points, as sentiment continued buoyed by the overnight markup in steel prices, ranging from $3 to $8 a ton.

U. S. Steel held its front-running position. Opening at 123½ on 10,000 shares, it swept into new high ground since 1931 at 125½ for a net gain of 5¾, before profit taking cut off a point.

Bethlehem advanced more than 3 at its peak and Youngstown 3¼ at a new top of 101. Republic also reached a peak above 35, up almost 2 points.

Rails were led upward by Baltimore & Ohio and Illinois Central, each spurting about 2 points into new high ground.

Merchandising shares, farm implements and several specialties were in active demand as the session passed the noon hour. Marshall Field climbed close to 2 points to a new peak. McKesson & Robbins was at new high levels above 15.

Utilities, oils, motors and aviations while generally improved, had gains limited to fractions for the most part.

Bonds were led upward by convertible industrial issues. Grains and cotton were firm, the latter recovering from an early drop.

Current Topics

The week-end survey of Dun & Bradstreet disclosed another step-up in the business tempo.

The review said spring spending had begun in earnest with sales volumes for the week reaching a new year's high. The unexpected extent of last-minute orders for Easter merchandise, it was added, pushed many wholesalers farther behind in deliveries.

Retail distribution for the country as a whole was placed at 8 to 10 per cent ahead of the previous week and from 15 to 25 per cent above the same period last year.

The French franc was off .00¼ of a cent in initial foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $4.88¾.

Calls Bonds

Chicago Building Corp. has called for redemption on April 1 the outstanding 6 per cent bonds of 1940 at 101. They are outstanding in amount of approximately $6,[illegible].

Wheeler Assails 'Boom Day' Bank Practices

Washington, March 5 (INS)—The "boom day" record of New York bankers accepting "financial favors" from the firm of J. P. Morgan & Company and later voting their banks into helping Morgan float securities that cost the public millions in losses was condemned today by Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, as a "vicious practice."

He declared it was "one of the great evils of the banking profession" when bankers personally profited from their official positions. He said this practice prevailed while the House of Morgan was financing the giant $3,000,000,000 Van Sweringen railroad empire and showed how both the investing public and the banks themselves lost millions of dollars when it collapsed.

Norris Proposes Utility Probe

A Federal Trade Commission inquiry into efforts of privately-owned public utilities to control public opinion on government ownership of utilities was proposed in a resolution offered in the Senate by Senator Norris of Nebraska.

The resolution provides $150,000 to cover expense of such an inquiry.

Among other things, the commission would be called upon to recommend legislation and give Congress the benefit of the study of the extent to which public ownership of utility facilities has increased since 1920.

Gillette Razor

Gillette Safety Razor Co. notified the New York Stock Exchange that it propose to reduce its authorized $5 convertible preference stock by 10,000 shares to 300,000 shares and its common stock by 20,000 shares to 2,781,269 shares.

Wall St. Hears

New York, March 5 (INS)—That Illinois Central R. R. (IL) is expected to show a 15 per cent increase in gross revenues during 1937.

That larger common dividends by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet (CPL) are considered possible.

That the 50-cent quarterly preferred rate of American Ice (AIS) is not considered secure.

B. C. Forbes:

Job, Man Clearing House Needed

By B. C. FORBES

What's the answer. This column constantly receives letters from trained men asking how they can find employment. Employers constantly complain of a scarcity of trained men.

What can be done to bring together trained men who want jobs and organizations that want trained men?

* * *

Here are extracts from a typical letter:

"No doubt the shortage of trained and experienced men has already begun to make itself felt. I am writing you in the hope that you may be able to supply the answer to my own problem, which, I feel, is identical with that of many other men throughout the country. It is, how to contact and sell my services to an industry in need of a trained man. I can furnish satisfactory references as to ability, honesty and sobriety.

"Some effective way is needed to bring men and managements together."

* * *

Now read this:

"While I have not been a large employer of labor, yet I have built enough houses to find out that there are scarcely any good carpenters, plumbers, or other tradesmen available. Most of them have no fundamental training whatever."

* * *

From a veteran worker:

"Don't blame the young men for not taking an interest in learning trades. There is practically no apprentice system in this country."

* * *

This suggestion is offered by another reader:

"I think the best way to relieve shortage of skilled labor is a two-year course in vocational school and two years of factory apprenticeship so that a boy starting at 16 would be through with apprenticeship by the time he is 20.

"I have worked in a number of shops where I never laid eyes on the complete product. If I were the management after a man had been with me for a month I would have him shown around the plant and let him see the finished product so that he will put extra skill and pride in his work. The manager should hold a meeting or a talk every month with his men. Much labor trouble could be easily avoided."

Carl Pinetti writes:

"I want to say you hit the nail on the head in your article, 'How to relieve shortage of skilled labor.' There are few employers today who will hire an apprentice, because the men they employ must have plenty of experience. I have been taking an apprenticeship course in a night school conducted by the city of New York, but was turned away due to lack of practical experience. If employers would go on that 15-point program you have outlined, there will be no shortage of labor during the following years."

* * *

President Eugene G. Grace, of Bethlehem Steel, employing 80,000 workers, contributes these observations helpful to young men who aspire to reap success:

"Until only a few years ago, the men entering this business gained their technical knowledge only through years of experience in the mills or in the offices. And there is still no substitute for experience. There never can be. Yet today through sound training in the class-rooms and laboratories of colleges and universities, men are acquiring a fundamental knowledge of the problems which they will face in their chosen work.

"The requirements of the steel industry have broadened so in recent years as to increase the need for college training in its personnel. Our organization has faith in the college man. We need him in our business and he needs us. He must have the ability to get along with men, to understand those who have had lesser opportunities and to realize that in various instances men without formal educational background may have acquired superior common sense, knowledge and judgment.

"The college man has exceptional opportunities. But, if he would be successful, he also has responsibilities. He must learn to work hard and like it. He must temper his approach to technical problems with practicality. He must examine himself, discover his weaknesses and correct them.

"Although to the young man these responsibilities may seem quite severe, their ready acceptance will enable him to assume at a later time the larger responsibilities which will assure realization of his objective and in the end the satisfaction of a job well done."

Kentucky—It Boasts Justly

Born to be MILD Not Wild!
Calvert's
Kentucky Pride
STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKEY

Kentucky points with pride to its "thoroughbred" products. Here, in one of the greatest distillery producing sections of the country, are pictured two horses, specimens of centuries of breeding. Newest addition to the Calvert Distilling Corporation family is "Kentucky Pride," a bourbon type of whiskey.

"Kentucky Pride," a Bourbon type of whiskey and a real thoroughbred, is the most recent addition to the Calvert Distilling Corporation family.

Calvert's slogan, "Born to be Mild, not Wild" is most convincing judging by the ready acceptance of those who appreciate real background in real whiskies.

"Kentucky Pride" like other Calvert products will be distilled in Kentucky, one of the greatest producing sections of the country. The new Calvert family-member will be distributed in the Boston area by United Liquors, Ltd., of Lansdowne street.

PROF. O'GORMAN RITES PLANNED

Worcester, March 5—Funeral arrangements were being made today for Professor Leo J. O'Gorman, 56, head of the education department at Holy Cross College, who died suddenly yesterday.

Professor O'Gorman was author of the college song "Oh, Holy Cross," sung at athletic events by the Crusaders.

He had been in ill health some time. His body was found in bed by his wife, Mrs. Clara O'Gorman. He leaves a son, Leo, Jr., and a daughter, Bernadine.

MRS. MARGARET KENNY

Mrs. Margaret Kenny, wife of William F. Kenny, former day editor of the Boston Globe, died at her home, Wallingford road, Brighton.

A high mass of requiem will be sung at St. Gabriel's Monastery,

'Dike Hero'

Cincinnati, March 5 (AP)—Patrolman John Cochran got a call for help from a distraught housewife. Her husband, she said, was battling a leaky water tank.

He found the man of the house valiantly plugging a hole with his finger. Ten inches away was the shut-off valve.

Commander Ryan's Reply To Oath Law Foes

DR. WILLIAM P. RYAN, State Commander of the American Legion, has answered the opposition to the Teachers' Oath Law.

To the legislative Committee on Education he addressed his remarks—not with bitterness or malice, but with the sympathetic understanding that one loyal American should have in treating with other loyal Americans.

He indicated confidence that the Oath Law would stay on the statute books; that the veterans who saved the nation in war could rely on the elected representatives of the people to safeguard it in peace.

Yet, with admirable patience and honesty, he took the arguments of those who oppose the law and answered them one by one.

COMMANDER RYAN did not try to ridicule the complaint of some educators that allegiance legislation was an "insult" to their profession.

Instead, he reminded them that every President of the United States, every Senator and Representative, every Governor, every Supreme Court Justice and every holder of public office, elective or appointive, takes a similar oath.

With proper respect for teachers and their responsible position in all communities, he stated the Legion's view that, far from being an "insult," the pledge actually raised the teaching profession to the dignified eminence it has long deserved.

In a manner becoming a former soldier, he faced the charge that the oath was a "restraint on academic freedom."

He revived a question, a deeply significant one:

"Do you think that the soldier boys who a brief generation ago offered to die for freedom would today advocate any legislation that would cause its death in our schools?"

KINDLY but firmly, Commander Ryan made it clear that repeal of the Oath Law now would be considered a harsh, unwarranted rebuke to the American Legion, to all former soldiers and to patriotic societies and individuals whose work resulted in its adoption two years ago.

"We are confident," he concluded, "that our legislators who take an oath themselves and who have read this law will readily dismiss the claim that there is anything dangerous in a pledge of allegiance to the Constitution of the State and the Constitution of the United States of America."

Harvard's New Plan

HARVARD UNIVERSITY, under the able leadership of President Conant, inaugurates a new "hobby study" plan designed to make education a lifelong duty, not a four-year "imposition."

Graduates are encouraged to adopt a program of systematic reading, especially American History, and to pursue it with determination, feeding minds as they would bodies.

Explains President Conant:

"The only worthwhile liberal education today is one which is a CONTINUING PROCESS going on throughout life."

There could be no better advice, none more conducive to happiness and success. It is worthy of America's foremost university.

In this intellectual age—college extension courses, good books, free lectures and newspapers within the means of all—ignorance is PROOF OF LAZINESS.

The banquet table of knowledge has no reserved seats, no special section for the fortunate few. THERE ARE PLACES FOR EVERYONE.

But the drawing up of the chair and the partaking of the feast rests entirely with the individual's own ambition and desire to achieve success by hard work.

The Murals Dispute

SOME people that borrow from Shakespeare may call it "Much Ado About Nothing," but, nonetheless, the controversy over the new murals in Boston's Public Welfare Building provokes a few laughs and many mourns.

A chief mourner is Mayor Mansfield, who, though confessing he's not an art authority, says:

"People resorting to that building for relief are entitled to have something more cheerful to look at than caricatures of their own troubles."

That is sound commonsense. Most people will approve it.

Relief, a temporary necessity tolerated until jobs and good wages can be found for everybody, should not be glorified. Certainly not perpetuated with paint and brush.

More inspirational would be murals depicting the fruits of working together unitedly in the spirit of our fathers who carved a nation in the wilderness and made it great.

R. O. T. C. Unit for B. C.

BOSTON COLLEGE'S alert, intelligent president, the Very Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, recognizes the need of training youth to defend themselves and others in the event of invasion by a foreign foe, the only kind of war America will tolerate.

That explains his desire to organize a Boston College Reserve Officers' Training Corps Unit and his endorsement of Senator Walsh's bill to make possible the organization.

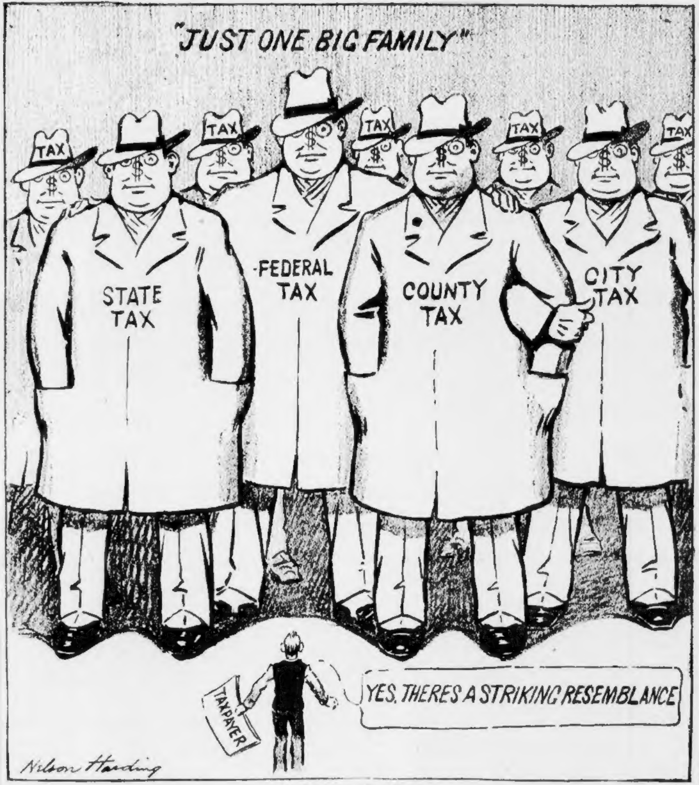
Like other leading educators, Father Gallagher knows that a healthy body is as important as a healthy mind and that one cannot long endure without the other.

Building bodies is a fundamental purpose of the R.O.T.C. It is an important and necessary adjunct to any liberal education.

Senator Walsh's bill should pass, and Boston College should have its R.O.T.C.

Other units should be established in other colleges. There can be no wiser expenditure of money, no better appreciation of the needs of youth and country.

There Are Giants in These Days



By Nelson Harding

We have giants in these days
Like the monsters of the past.
Ours are real ones that have grown
Lately to proportions vast!

One big family, springing up
To a terrifying size,
Huge and threatening they loom
Right before taxpayers' eyes!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 5—Thoughts while strolling: Impossibilities—Vincent Lopez with his hair mussed and Quentin Reynolds with a stay comb effect. The tune "Valencia" suggests the Ile de France pulling out. That glittering new flower shop on Park avenue in the 50's.

Memory: Sharpening the butcher knife on the edge of the milk crock. Grandest oldster of the literary crowd: Opie Read, aged 84. Ride the elevated and see New York's back door. Add beautiful hands: Claire Boothe Luce's. But none tops those of Helen Menken.

A star fell out of heaven: Merle Oberon. They can't laugh Clifton Webb out of going nowhere without his mother. A pretty swell trait indeed. Whatever became of Wilda Bennett? A crop of look-alikes: Serge Einstein and Norman Bel Geddes, M. Lincoln Schuster and Sam Hoffenstein and Frank Scully and Washington.

Rhyme: A lady I favor is Phyllis Haver. Also: Nick Kenny in a shepherd plaid benny. Gypsy Rose Lee's autobiography in capsule: From Minsky to mink. Hendrik Van Loon is shrinking, for goodness sakes! The only writer I know built for an eyeglass ribbon is Charles B. Driscoll.

Ace of the old melodramatic lines—Father to erring daughter in "Way Down East": "Out of my house. I'll have no dinner of your gittin'!" Abe Lyman suggests the second baseman on the Keokuk team. And what a shortstop Joe Laurie, Jr. would have made for the Three I League.

Percy Crosby, I imagine, devotes more thought and energy to Christmas cards than almost any sender. His are true works of exquisite art the receiver may frame and hand down to posterity with pride. His last Christmas offering has come belatedly from the framer. It is a reproduction of a Crosby painting of a Virginia sunrise, a spreading suffusion of rare tints on his own estate at McLean, Va.

It is one of those imageries of dawn, a song of symphony in color, that flutters the heart, catches the breath and makes the beholder breathe a fervent little prayer to be a better boy. We think of Crosby as the creator of the beloved cartoon moppet, "Skippy," and as great as that is, he does far greater things.

One of the interior decorator boys has what he calls a Narcissus room in his flossy apartment on the very piping rock stretch of East End avenue. Where Lawrence Tibbett and so many others live. It is done entirely in mirror save for a silvery sheen of ash gray carpet. The walls, ceilings and doors are entirely covered with looking glass, as are the chairs, center table and lamp stands. The indirect lighting casts a pink glow.

My interest in the curbstone salesman and his raspy spiel never lags. I was on the sidelines today when one with a Ned Sparks manner and voice tossed away his brown paper cigarette end and went into his pitch in an alley—the only alley I know in town, by the way—near Grand Central. He was hawking a 25-cent fountain pen and for good measure chucked in a set of collar buttons, a needle threader and a vest pocket barometer.

His asides to his audience were classic in cynicisms when the customers refused to buy. I remained for a half hour and he made but two legitimate sales. Certainly with that much enthusiasm and endeavor in any other line he could have made ten times as much and not faced possibility of a police pick-up, either.

The most unusual stage job of the season was that of a professional screamer. She got $28 a week to let go a lulu of an off-stage shriek seven time a week. In private life she is Mrs. Phyllis Bolce and her top pay was $50 for a single eerie, blood-curdling scream in a Joan Crawford picture. Screaming comes natural to her. It is a gift. When the time comes for her to do her stuff she simply opens her mouth and gives. And usually registers an inch or so above High C. As she says: "It is good work, if you can find it."

In one of the Follies there was a fellow who imitated a whinnying horse off stage. Somebody dug him up in a remote reach of the Ozarks. He got $5 a performance, became citified and I see him around now and then at sporting events and in a haberdashery which he owns. Fame on a horse laugh!

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I am not writing in a church—nor with what one might call a "religious" purpose. I am simply thinking about people as I know them, not during Lent but always—people with their ordinary natures and everyday demands. And my heart is heavy as I think.

For each day I realize more deeply how lonely people are, how bewildered. Even the best and bravest of us hungering for comfort . . . even the worst or most foolish of us longing for something finer. All of us, no matter how clever or sophisticated we may seem, just little children, reaching for a Hand in the dark, listening for a Voice.

And since this is so, I am thinking what a good thing it is that we have set apart a period when we will all try to be a little quieter and kinder, a little more open to Beauty and Truth.

We need quietness so terribly, we muddled moderns. We've made such a mess of our lives, when—so easily—we might have known joy and abundance and peace. There is so much love and loveliness in this "great big beautiful world."

And we come into it so eager and open, ready to be kind and fair. You can see that eagerness in the face of any little child. It is like looking into another, unspoiled, shining world.

WE GROW OLD

Then, almost overnight, the change comes. Instead of starry-eyed, laughing, trusting hildren we become sour, suspicious adults, crippled by presure, lashed by haste, poisoned by hate. All because we have let greed and speed get the best of us. And though the air is a twinkle with little birds, and spring is dancing over the hill, there is no springtime in us, no song—only a dreariness and weariness and black bewilderment.

So it seems to me a most blessed thing that we should have Lent—quite apart from its churchly significance. I do not know the theological history of Lent. I do not know why men should have set these weeks apart for the coming of God into our tangled lives.

I do not know who or what God is, nor pretend to understand His mysterious workings. But I am convinced there is a God. I am sure that I feel His presence in every kind, brave and beautiful act, and am strengthened by that presence.

So I am glad for Lent, and I am going to keep it. Not in churches—though I will enter them when I can. Not with prayers and rituals . . . but wherever I am, in my office or home, with my daily thoughts and desires and acts.

For these next few weeks, I am going to let God in.

I am going to clear my life of its clutter to welcome Him, as I would clear my home to welcome any loved and honored friend. I am going to shut out the speed and pressure and foolish, chattering hysteria.

I am going to clean up the old, unhealthy accumulations of remorse, resentment and grief.

I am going to open the windows of my life to laughter . . . and the doors of my life to love . . . . and let peace and joy flood it like sunshine.

I am going to let God in. For these next weeks I am going to be as kind as I can in all the small ways of life . . . as patient as I can . . . as simple and friendly, as honest and gentle and full of faith.

BE THANKFUL

And I am going to take time to see and be glad for the beauty around me. It is so long since I watched for spring as a little child watches, and rejoices in it—noting each tiny bud and tassel and blade. Now I shall notice them all. And each noticing will be like a small song in my heart which only God hears . . . a brief prayer which only God understands.

For these days of Lent, I am going to let God in. Not as a Christian, but just as His child. I am going to make my life lovely . . . and open it wide . . . and wait for His coming. And after He has come, I shall try never to lose Him again . . . never again to drift back into the old senseless chaos . . . but always and forever to feel, and pass along, His comforting friendliness and peace.

Please help me, God, to keep your Lent this way. Amen.

India on the Move

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Women of India have gone to the polls to vote in the elections decreed by the King-Emperor. In many instances they refused to lower their veils to reveal their faces. This was quite annoying to the polling clerks, but in the end they had to be satisfied with it.

The Nizam of Hyderabad, a gentlemen worth just a little in excess of $2,000,000,000, has celebrated his silver jubilee as ruler of his agricultural state with its 14,000,000 inhabitants. He did it on a modest scale, in keeping with the frugality which belies his title as the richest man in the world.

He is preparing to go to London, to see the Coronation of George VI in May, an expedition which will set him back about a million dollars. He wants to see the King-Emperor about postponing for two or three years the entry of Hyderabad into the federation of states which England has ordained for India.

News about India brings to mind the statement which recently was made by General Smuts from his point of vantage in South Africa.

"Sleeping Asia," said this soldier-statesman, "is awakening, is stirring from one end to the other. Two-thirds of the human race are on the move."

India alone contains one-sixth of the world's population, 352,000,000 souls crowded into a land which is about one-half the size of the United States. India embraces two-thirds of the population of the British Empire and, looked upon from this viewpoint, it has been a case of the tail waving the lion in the matter of government.

A CHANGED WORLD

Things are different today, and no one knows this better than the gentlemen who are looking after the interests of the tight little island between the North and the Irish Seas.

For old democracies such as England, France and the United States, imperialism is pretty much a thing of the past. It is left to those lands in which, for many and varied reasons, there is a dominant nationalism and an urge to break through the boundaries—countries, such as Italy, Germany and Japan.

This year marks the 180th anniversary of England's domination of the mighty and mystic empire called India. Then it was that Robert Clive, erstwhile clerk in the West India Company, won the Battle of Plassey. He won it because of a storm which interrupted the fighting at a time when his small force was on the way to annihilation. Clive covered his guns and kept his powder dry. His enemy did not. Treachery in the nabob's ranks also helped Clive.

The Clives and Mulvaneys are no more. What imperialism was left in England after the Boer War was quenched in the World War. John Bull's young men no longer rush to take the King's chilling for the life of a soldier up on the Afghan border or down by the ghats of the Ganges. The truth is that one of England's serious problems is that of getting recruits enough for its home forces.

COMPULSORY TRAINING?

Only the other day Neville Chamberlain startled the world with his announcement of a $7,000,000,000 armament program. Yet, while he was outlining this program, the war office was bemoaning the failure of an intensive drive to thicken "the thin red line of heroes." Unless there is an improvement in the European situation within the year, it is not at all unlikely that England will be compelled to resort to some form of compulsory military training.

Before a war comes, if it is to come, England would like to have her problem in India on a fair way to solution. With all her energies, she is putting into effect the Constitution granted two years ago, which gives India the status of a dominion with self-governing states. Pressure is being put on the ruling native princes to bring their principalities into the framework.

It is a gigantic task and its completion is not being helped any by the unyielding opposition of the Indian National Congress which is personified in Mahatma Gandhi.

The Nationalists are against the Constitution. They have pledged themselves to participate in no project in which the British Empire may be engaged, and they have declared a boycott on the Coronation of King George VI.

Asia will stand a lot of watching, for, as General Smuts says, two-thirds of the human race are on the move.

Training and Thinking

By Charles S. Ryckman

Dr. James Rowland Angell, retiring as the president of Yale University, states an interesting formula for university training.

This is his conception of the function of the American University:

"It is its business to train men to think and to think soberly, to inculcate, if necessary, the bitter lessons of history by familiarizing them with the malign consequences which often flow from yielding to ignorant and ill-informed impulse, especially when this derives from fear, from malace, or personal vanity and lust of power."

Declaring that never before has it been so easy for the demagogue and the political medicine man to get a hearing and attract a following, Dr. Angell remarks:

"We have begun in our own country to get a foretaste of what may happen when even good men become intoxicated with power."

This is solemn food for American thought.

The destinies of our country have been more and more committed in recent years to the care of men the people honor as GOOD men.

The powers entrusted to these men are tremendous.

The extent of their intoxication with those powers is more real than the people yet understand.

Current efforts to reshape forms of government, to challenge proven principles and sound traditions, to subdue judicial authority to executive will—all these are instances of good men in whom the people trust becoming intoxicated with power.

American universities indeed have "an indispensable part to play," as Dr. Angell says, if there is not to be profound change in the direction of American democracy.

That's That -:- By Bruce Gustin

President Roosevelt's sugar message concerns every American citizen. There may be only 100,000 American farmers growing sugar beets, but 127 million American people buy and eat sugar. Anything that affects the supply of sugar and the price of sugar is a matter of personal concern to every one of them.

The President recommends the levy of a special tax of not more than three-fourts cent a pound on sugar. He estimates that will raise 100 million dollars a year. Part of this money would be used to pay benefits to beet and cane growers. The balance presumably would go into the treasury to make up part of the revenue lost through the reduction of the tariff on Cuban sugar.

"I am definitely advised," the President told Congress, "that such a tax would not increase the average cost of sugar to consumers." When the first processing tax was levied on sugar, the American people were told that should not increase the price of sugar, but it or something did. It is possible that the 100 million dollars a year tax now proposed to be levied on sugar will be absorbed by the processors and prodeers and that will not be added to the price paid by the consumer. But that is very improbable. If this sugar tax is not passed onto the sugar-consuming public, it will be one of the very few times a tax hasn't been taken out of the pocket of the consumer.

John E. Dalton, former head of the sugar section of the AAA, has written a book on "Sugar," published by the MacMillan Company. In it he says the nation is "making a contribution of approximately 200 million dollars toward maintenance" of the sugar industry. The proposed tax on sugar will boost this contribution of the public to 300 million dollars. A reasonable subsidy for the DOMESTIC sugar industry is good business. But what has been done to help the sugar industry has been designed largely to aid the Cuban sugar industry.

In his message to Congress, the President said: "In order to protect the expansion of markets for American exports, I recommend that NO DECREASE BE MADE IN THE SHARE OF OTHER COUNTRIES IN THE TOTAL QUOTAS." The effect of such a policy will be the continued restriction of domestic production by American farmers raising sugar beets and sugar cane. It will preserve for Cuba a large share of the American sugar market.

The fact that sugar is the only essential food which this country never has produced in quantities sufficient to meet its consumption requirements is not the only reason domestic sugar production should be expanded. Increasing sugar beet production stimulates other American industries which need larger markets. There is coal mining, for example. A larger consumption of coal is needed. Beet sugar factories burn a pound of coal for every pound of sugar they extract from beets. The cloth for bags, filter cloth, etc., used by American sugar factories takes the cotton from thousands of acres down south. Every acre of sugar beets furnishes approximately $35 of revenue to the railroads.
